Germany Seeking To Keep Egypt Out of the War

Independence To Be Reward for Not Joining in Africa Campaign

Von Ribbentrop and Mussolini Hold Long Conference; Aid of Spain Also Sought by Axis

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Sept. 20 (AP)—(Friday)—Axis assurance of independence to Egypt on condition she keeps out of the African campaign was set forward in many quarters today as German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop continued his veiled negotiations in Rome.

The new order which the Axis is planning for Europe extends also to Africa, these informed sources said.

Inspired interpretation of uninformative Rome communiques left no doubt that Egypt was the focus of Axis attention.

Von Ribbentrop and Mussolini Confer

ROME, Sept. 19 (AP)—German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop came to Rome today on an armored train equipped with anti-aircraft guns and conferred for two hours with Premier Mussolini on joint Axis plans to defeat Britain and rule Europe.

Spain's "co-operation" in winning the war, with Gibraltar as her reward, was widely discussed as a likely subject between the two leaders.

From Mussolini's side the future of Greece and Turkey—last holdouts against Axis domination in southeastern Europe—also were believed brought up.

In the war to the finish against Britain, Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, declared other European nations, "particularly friendly ones," are involved "not as spectators alone."

Refers to Spain

This was considered a reference to Spain, and there have been unconfirmed rumors of Axis attempts to persuade Spain to at least permit troop passage for a land attack on Britain's stronghold at Gibraltar.

Ramon Serrano Suner, Spanish minister and pro-Axis adviser to his brother-in-law, General Franco, is still in Berlin where Ribbentrop had conferred with him prior to the Rome conference.

Italy already is launched in an offensive in Egypt toward the Suez canal, one key in Britain's hold on the Mediterranean.

United States trends since the trade of fifty American destroyers for British western hemisphere bases also were considered by observers as involved in the talks—which may prove a pivot in the war's next turn.

May Seize French Land

Some foreign observers thought the Axis likewise might be considering occupation of French North African territories as well as all France.

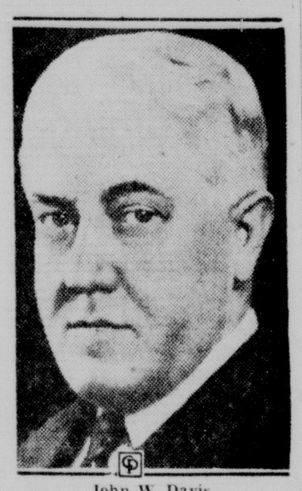

Gayda indicated southeast Europe was on the agenda when he said "not all pending problems in southeastern Europe can be considered settled," and added that the conference would be "busy with clarifications."

Diplomatic and military experts have expressed the belief an Italian defeat of Britain in Egypt would place both Turkey and Greece in difficulties, possibly depriving them of Britain's naval aid and forcing them into the Axis orbit.

Italy has already proclaimed territorial claims on Greece.

John W. Davis Opposes Third Term for President of the U. S.

DEMOCRATIC LEADER AGAINST THIRD TERM

John W. Davis

Former Candidate for President Favors One Six Year Term

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP)—John W. Davis, the Democratic party's nominee for the presidency in 1924, spoke out today in support of a proposed constitutional amendment limiting presidents to one six-year term.

As vigorous in voice and manner as when he campaigned unsuccessfully against Calvin Coolidge, the sixty-year old attorney told a Senate submittee that the man had not yet been born "to whom I would entrust for more than eight years at the most the vast, the expanding, the fateful powers of the presidency of the United States."

Saying he could not recall a single case where a republic had survived "except in name" after the coming of a permanent chief executive, Davis declared:

See Course for Worry

"With the two-term tradition broken down, and no law to take its place, we have every reason to dread a future occupancy of the White House limited only by the ambition or the life of the tenant."

He expressed belief that the framers of the consitution would have adopted a prohibition against reelection of presidents "if the great figure of Washington had not dominated the scene."

"It is the nature of the human animal, most human animals, to love place and prominence, adulation and power," he continued.

"Some, of course, care for all this more than others. Some love it so much that the power they have is never gladly or voluntarily surrendered.

Always a Good Excuse

"The appetite growing by what it feeds on becomes the master passion of their lives. Such men, even while they realize that some day their power must be laid down, can always find a reason why the fatal day must be postponed. In their minds there is always a crisis in which their services are indispensable; always some great work in hand which they, and they alone, can do."

Senator Burke, (D-Neb.) chairman of the subcommittee and author of the six-year tenure limitation, thanked the witness and recalled that sixteen Democrats now in the Senate, as well as Senators LaFollette (Prog-Wis) and Norris (Ind.-Neb.), had voted in 1928 for a resolution opposing a third presidential term.

Excess Profits Tax Approved in Senate 46 to 22

Huge Increases Provided in Event United States Enters War

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP)—A bill levying an excess profits tax on corporations and making revenue law revisions designed to speed the defense program was approved by the Senate today, 46 to 22, after the legislators had added an amendment calling for huge increases in taxation if the United States goes to war.

The measure now will go to a joint conference committee to reconcile wide differences between Senate and House versions.

The peace-time provisions of the Senate bill would increase the normal income tax rate on corporations earning $25,000 or more from the present 20.9 percent to 24 percent. It also would impose a tax of from 25 to 50 percent on profits defined as excess under a formula provided in the bill. The House bill did not contain the increase in the normal corporation tax rate.

Both House and Senate adopted provisions suspending existing profit limitations on government contracts for construction of warships and airplanes and permitting corporations to charge off against earnings over a five-year period the cost of defense manufacturing facilities completed subsequent to Jan. 1, 1940.

Amendment Adopted

Just before passing the bill the chamber adopted an amendment by Senator Connally (D-Tex) to set up a schedule of income tax rates, effect in time of war only, ranging up to eighty percent on highest-bracket taxpayers. The normal tax for individuals in time of war would be fixed at ten percent cent (against the present four percent) and that of corporations at thirty-five percent.

Corporations would be required to pay a war tax of up to sixty per cent on profits in excess of five percent. There would be a specific exemption of $5,000.

Under the peace-time excess profits levy a corporation would determine the amount to be taxed as excess profits in one of two ways. It would take the amount in excess of average earnings for the four-year period 1936 through 1939,

Willkie Advocates Special Tax Board In Western Speech

Hopes To Turn United States Away from Totalitarian System

If Elected He Will Propose Immediate Formation of Commission

By WILLIAM B. ARDERY

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 19 (AP)—Proposing the formation of a special tax commission, Wendell L. Willkie outlined tonight this four-point program which he said would turn the United States away from "a totalitarian system":

"1. The rules under which business is conducted must be clear and must be stable.

"2. Government policies affecting business should be consistent.

"3. Government competition with business must be kept within well-defined limits. It must not stop the flow of capital into new productive enterprise.

"4. Business must be given a chance to make a profit."

In a speech prepared for delivery in the Memorial Coliseum, Willkie contended that the Roosevelt administration had set up a tax structure that is "unscientific, repressive, and loaded with punitive measures."

"If elected," Mr. Willkie said, "I propose the immediate establishment of a special commission to study the whole tax question. Such a commission must be composed of government officials, members of both houses of Congress, business men, representatives of labor and tax experts.

"It should study the needs of the federal, state, and local governments. The effects of taxation upon the individual and upon the nation must be analyzed together with the cost and complexity of administering various types of taxes.

Understands Labor

Toward the end of his address, the Republican presidential nominee said he claimed to understand some of labor's problems because he had been a business man by training.

"Labor is entitled to the protection of progressive labor legislation," Willkie declared, "such as the Wage and Hours law and the National Industrial Labor Relations act."

Willkie, who received a noisy reception on his arrival here this afternoon, declared that labor laws "must be administered in the interest of the whole nation."

"Their purpose is to reduce industrial strife, not foment it," he continued, adding:

"The proper function of our government is to police the activities of its people so that they do not injure each other or encroach upon each other's rights. It is in this spirit that government should stand with relation to workers and employers, not as opponents of either party, but as a friend to both."

The candidate said that labor, along with business and government, must remember "that we in America are young.

No Indispensable Man

"Unlimited capacity for growth lies ahead of us," he added. "We are not old enough to have an indispensable man—or an indispensable law—or an indispensable theory of economics."

McNutt Describes Willkie as a Man Without a Party

Says He Is a Good Gag-Man with Engaging Personality

BALTIMORE, Sept. 19 (AP)—Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator, described the Republican national ticket tonight as a "terrifying choice" in "this uncertain world."

He reviewed world conditions in an address prepared for a Maryland State Democratic rally at Baltimore, and declared:

"During the next four years, the nation which lacks strength of determination, the nation which lacks moral fiber, the nation which acts slowly and falteringly will have little chance to survive."

He described Wendell L. Willkie, Republican presidential nominee, as "a man who daily demonstrates his inability to lead his own party."

"He's a good gag-man and his personality is engaging," McNutt continued, "but you can't frighten a dictator by rumpling up your hair and making wise cracks."

Criticizes Speeches

McNutt asserted the Republican nominee's speeches "have no political significance whatever to the future of this nation," adding "his own party doesn't believe in them.

"Willkie is a man without a party.

"Nothing but apathy and almost complete indifference on the part of Republican leaders both in and out of Congress has greeted his pledges and commitments. So far as can be observed, he has not influenced a single vote either in the House of Representatives or in the

GERMAN BOMBER CLOSES SCHOOL FOR YOUNGSTERS

Germans Threaten Terrible Attacks On British Isles

Press, However, Hints War May Continue for the Winter

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Sept. 19 — The journalistic voice of official Germany threatened England and her civilians today with a whole catalogue of terror and declared that, in a Rome conference, the Axis was assembling its full power "for the last round battle against Britain."

The press, in which there appeared hints that the war might go on through the winter, opened up in angry chorus against British bombing attacks in Germany, and the Nazi high command officially accused British pilots of having killed nine children and wounded twelve in raids on plainly marked hospitals in Prussia.

Demands Retaliation

Der Angriff, the organ of Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels, demanded retaliation a thousand-fold; Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung thundered: "the scoring of accounts will be terrible."

"Hereafter," declared the newspaper Nachtausgabe, "not the slightest consideration need be taken" for British civilians.

Authorized German spokesmen said that "tangible acts" would follow the Rome discussions between German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and Premier Mussolini.

These "acts," it was indicated in various quarters, would be against "vulnerable" points in the British empire; the notion generally conveyed was that the war was going to open up in scope as well as in time.

Reichmarshal Hermann Goering's National Zeitung summed it up this way:

Next Mission of Allies

"Whoever contemplates the situation sees clearly before his eyes the next mission of the Allies (Axis). Reduced to a short for-

Japan Hurls Ultimatum At French Indo-China

Tokyo Insists New Demands Must Be Complied with in 72 Hours

HANOI, SEPT. 20 (FRIDAY)—(AP)—Official foreign quarters said today they had received information that Japan had given French Indo-China until Sunday to comply with new Japanese demands but that the French were unyielding.

Upon receipt of the 72-hour ultimatum, the French virtually told the Japanese to "go ahead", these quarters said.

They expressed the opinion, however, this new development did not necessarily mean the Japanese would resort immediately to military action but that instead they might seek to reach a face-saving agreement at the last minute.

Negotiations May Come to Quick End

BY C. YATES DANIEL

HANOI, FRENCH INDO-CHINA, SEPT. 19 (AP)—New and unexplained demands threatened tonight to upset the negotiations between the government of French Indo-China and the Japanese who have sought the right to move troops and supplies through the colony to facilitate their war against China.

The French government issued a statement saying:

"Negotiations between the French authorities and the Japanese mission have reached a delicate state, the Japanese having presented new demands which do not seem compatible with instructions from the French government and which deviate from previous agreements, but the negotiations are continuing."

The statement offered no explanation of the new demands, but informed sources declared the Japanese suddenly had shifted the emphasis in the negotiations from their desire to move troops and supplies through the colony to a request for bases which could have little connection with the Japanese army's China campaign.

Meanwhile, 160 Japanese nationals from all points in northern Indo-China gathered at Hanoi and Haiphong awaiting a Japanese order to leave the colony.

Earlier in the day Japan announced her determination to withdraw civilian nationals and consular representatives from the colony to lessen the danger of "unfortunate incidents" when her troops march

Buy Suit, Get Money Back If Drafted

ATLANTA, Sept. 19 (AP)—Two Atlanta stores announced a "money back if drafted" plan today for the sale of fall clothes.

A receipt will be given the purchaser of each suit entitling him to return it in event of conscription by the army and receive a refund of his money.

The plan does NOT apply to volunteers.

37,000 Guardsmen Called for Active Duty in November

Plans for National Draft Being Speeded by U. S. Officials

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP)—Tentative plans for calling 37,000 more national guardsmen to active duty in November were announced today by Secretary Stimson, while airmail planes rushed master copies of civilian draft registration forms to central points in each state.

The new militia orders would bring the total of guardsmen mustered into active service to 133,000, and would principally affect the fifty-sixth cavalry brigade (Texas), the thirty-first division (Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana), the 35th division (Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri) and the 36th division (Texas.)

The plan calls for mobilizing 1,377 officers and men from the fifty-sixth cavalry on Nov. 18, at Fort Bliss, Tex., and the remainder on Nov. 25, at Camp Blanding, Fla., Camp Robinson, Ark., and Brownwood, Tex. No additional guardsmen are to be called until after Jan. 1.

Sudden Pre-Dawn Attack Follows Long Night Raid On City Proper

British Gunners Repulse One Assault, but Nazis Return To Battle with Renewed Fury

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Sept 20 (Friday)—German dive bombers rocked the northwest area of bomb-scarred London with a sudden, concerted attack just before dawn today. At the same time another contingent struck at an East London area.

The German planes abruptly began coming over again in relays following a period of relative calm. They blasted away with high explosive and incenediary bombs at their objectives.

The new outburst of bombing came after the Nazis' activity had been reduced in the early morning hours.

Earlied Attack Slowed Up

A barrage of anti-aircraft fire around the City of London last night and early today slowed somewhat the pace of the German night assault on the British capital as the battle of London neared the ertical Equinox period.

The Germans again struck at all parts of the metropolis but were unable to match the intensity of the Tuesday night and Wednesday morning attack which saw bombs rained in many sections of the city.

(Apparently the raid still was under way when this dispatch was filed but new censorship regulations prevent the dispatch of the exact time of the beginning and end of the air attacks.)

(Some quarters have said Adolf Hitler might attempt an invasion of Britain before the approaching Equinox, which signals fall storms that would make more difficult the transportation of troops across the channel. The autumnal Equinox comes next Sunday night.)

Only intermittent gun and bomb flashes were seen as the morning wore on.

Raid In Small Groups

Small groups of raiders circled the metropolis or cut across it in the wake of their earlier fellows who unleased loads of bombs.

Mammoth German bombs exploding in Central London tonight made the streets as bright as Times Square in New York and fell with roaring blasts that shook buildings from top to bottom.

This thirteenth consecutive nightly raid on London was loosed in heavy clouds and over the low, thick ceiling the drone of Nazi motors could be clearly heard.

Anti-aircraft cannon sent up continuous streams of bursting shrapnel.

It was the second attack since dawn, but the previous raid was declared by the air ministry to have been made by only two German planes—one of which was shot down—which boomed east London.

During this daylight action there was an undetermined number of civilian casualties but it was declared that nothing of military importance was hit.

A total of five German planes was destroyed during the day over England, the ministry said.

Now a Routine Horror

As the night assault began the streets were empty, the people were no longer interested in watching what now has become a routine honnor, returning every evening with the darkness.

An official of the new United States embassy in Grosvenor Square, Mayfair, stood on its roof and heard

Jackson Says Government Keeps Close Watch on Communist Groups

NEW YORK, Sept. 10 (AP)—Attorney General Robert H. Jackson said today that "counter-espionage is much more effective from our point of view than a number of arrests" and disclosed that the government was keeping all Nazi and Communists groups under surveillance.

"That is said to be an infringement on civil liberties, but I don't believe that because we are a tolerant people, we also have to be ignorant," he told convention delegates of the U. S. conference of mayors.

He said his department was not interested in sensationalism or "tips" from excited volunteer vigilantes. The attorney general said the mayors and community figures of good character were the best sources of information the department of justice had in its sabotage prevention work.

Closer to People

"You are closer to the people than your government in Washington can be," he said.

Another speaker, Howard O. Hunter, acting commissioner of the WPA, predicted the $5,000,000,000 in defense appropriations for fiscal 1941 would increase private employment by between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 persons. More than $500,000,000 had been spent by the WPA

Defense Board Lets Contracts For Upwards of $6,000,000,000

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP)—Donald M. Nelson, coordinator of defense purchases, reported tonight that the Defense Commission had cleared contracts totalling over $6,000,000,000.

"This amount exceeds by 300 percent," he said, "contract awards for any entire year of peacetime military procurement." Such divergent products as shoes, ships and machinery for manufacturing tanks were represented in the total. Delivery dates were not announced.

Outlining in a radio address some of the problems involved in the huge purchasing program, Nelson said that the broadest was fitting military defense requirements to productive capacity with a minimum of interference with normal business.

To that end, he said, the government was endeavoring to utilize off-season production.

"In addition, placing orders for military requirements in slack times reduces the overhead of the plant by employing its facilities at a higher level of capacity. This, in turn, results in lower prices both for civilian consumers and the government."

Nelson said that the government also was making its specifications conform as nearly as possible to commercial standards so that existing productive machinery could be used.

Nelson said attention also was given to areas of unemployment in letting contracts.

Gigantic Searchlights For the U. S. Army

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 19 (AP)—The United States army will have anti-aircraft searchlights so powerful that persons twelve miles away can read newspapers in the 800,000 candle power light.

Philip D. Reed, chairman of the board of General Electric Company, said today that among a dozen other things his company is manufacturing for national defense are the searchlights, five feet in diameter.

Toland Would Search for Fifth Columnists Inside Labor Board

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Sept. 19 (AP) — Declaring "a hint of radicalism permeates" the National Labor Relations Board personnel, Edmund M. Toland, general counsel for a Congressional investigation of the NLRB, said today that any "Fifth Column" search "might very well begin within" the board.

"Because it has been given jurisdiction over disputes between capital and labor," Toland told the metal mining convention of the American Mining Congress, the NLRB "is one of the most vital links in our defense program."

"Latest Act of Insolence"

Toland declared the board's latest act of insolence was its refusal to abolish its division of economic research, headed by David J. Saposs, when it was "the intent of Congress to abolish the division."

Toland, calling Saposs "Russian-born," said he "has been identified through his life with various radical labor movements," and asserted the board retained him and his major subordinates by "utilizing the perfectly obvious subterfuge of merely changing the name of the division to the Technical Service Division."

He said there was "a close and intimate connection between Edwin S. Smith, NLRB member, and Harry Bridges, Pacific coast CIO leader

"Hereafter," declared the newspaper Nachtausgabe, "not the slightest consideration need be taken" for British civilians.

Authorized German spokesmen said that "tangible acts" would follow the Rome discussions between German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and Premier Mussolini.

These "acts," it was indicated in various quarters, would be against "vulnerable" points in the British empire; the notion generally conveyed was that the war was going to open up in scope as well as in time.

Reichmarshal Hermann Goering's National Zeitung summed it up this way:

Next Mission of Allies

"Whoever contemplates the situation sees clearly before his eyes the next mission of the Allies (Axis). Reduced to a short for-

Tokyo Insists New Demands Must Be Complied with in 72 Hours

HANOI, SEPT. 20 (FRIDAY)—(AP)—Official foreign quarters said today they had received information that Japan had given French Indo-China until Sunday to comply with new Japanese demands but that the French were unyielding.

Upon receipt of the 72-hour ultimatum, the French virtually told the Japanese to "go ahead", these quarters said.

They expressed the opinion, however, this new development did not necessarily mean the Japanese would resort immediately to military action but that instead they might seek to reach a face-saving agreement at the last minute.

Negotiations May Come to Quick End

BY C. YATES DANIEL

HANOI, FRENCH INDO-CHINA, SEPT. 19 (AP)—New and unexplained demands threatened tonight to upset the negotiations between the government of French Indo-China and the Japanese who have sought the right to move troops and supplies through the colony to facilitate their war against China.

The French government issued a statement saying:

"Negotiations between the French authorities and the Japanese mission have reached a delicate state, the Japanese having presented new demands which do not seem compatible with instructions from the French government and which deviate from previous agreements, but the negotiations are continuing."

The statement offered no explanation of the new demands, but informed sources declared the Japanese suddenly had shifted the emphasis in the negotiations from their desire to move troops and supplies through the colony to a request for bases which could have little connection with the Japanese army's China campaign.

Meanwhile, 160 Japanese nationals from all points in northern Indo-China gathered at Hanoi and Haiphong awaiting a Japanese order to leave the colony.

Earlier in the day Japan announced her determination to withdraw civilian nationals and consular representatives from the colony to lessen the danger of "unfortunate incidents" when her troops march

Buy Suit, Get Money Back If Drafted

ATLANTA, Sept. 19 (AP)—Two Atlanta stores announced a "money back if drafted" plan today for the sale of fall clothes.

A receipt will be given the purchaser of each suit entitling him to return it in event of conscription by the army and receive a refund of his money.

The plan does NOT apply to volunteers.

37,000 Guardsmen Called for Active Duty in November

Plans for National Draft Being Speeded by U. S. Officials

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP)—Tentative plans for calling 37,000 more national guardsmen to active duty in November were announced today by Secretary Stimson, while airmail planes rushed master copies of civilian draft registration forms to central points in each state.

The new militia orders would bring the total of guardsmen mustered into active service to 133,000, and would principally affect the fifty-sixth cavalry brigade (Texas), the thirty-first division (Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana), the 35th division (Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri) and the 36th division (Texas.)

The plan calls for mobilizing 1,377 officers and men from the fifty-sixth cavalry on Nov. 18, at Fort Bliss, Tex., and the remainder on Nov. 25, at Camp Blanding, Fla., Camp Robinson, Ark., and Brownwood, Tex. No additional guardsmen are to be called until after Jan. 1.

The conscription forms were for-

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 20 (Friday)—German dive bombers rocked the northwest area of bomb-scarred London with a sudden, concerted attack just before dawn today. At the same time another contingent struck at an East London area.

The German planes abruptly began coming over again in relays following a period of relative calm. They blasted away with high explosive and incendiary bombs at their objectives.

The new outburst of bombing came after the Nazis' activity had been reduced in the early morning hours.

Earlier Attack Slowed Up

A barrage of anti-aircraft fire around the City of London last night and early today slowed somewhat the pace of the German night assault on the British capital as the battle of London neared the critical Equinox period.

The Germans again struck at all parts of the metropolis but were unable to match the intensity of the Tuesday night and Wednesday morning attack which saw bombs rained in many sections of the city.

(Apparently the raid still was under way when this dispatch was filed but new censorship regulations prevent the dispatch of the exact time of the beginning and end of the air attacks.)

(Some quarters have said Adolf Hitler might attempt an invasion of Britain before the approaching Equinox, which signals fall storms that would make more difficult the transportation of troops across the channel. The autumnal Equinox comes next Sunday night.)

Only intermittent gun and bomb flashes were seen as the morning wore on.

Raid In Small Groups

Small groups of raiders circled the metropolis or cut across it in the wake of their earlier fellows who unleased loads of bombs.

Mammoth German bombs exploding in Central London tonight made the streets as bright as Times Square in New York and fell with roaring blasts that shook buildings from top to bottom.

This thirteenth consecutive nightly raid on London was loosed in heavy clouds and over the low, thick ceiling the drone of Nazi motors could be clearly heard.

Anti-aircraft cannon sent up continuous streams of bursting shrapnel.

It was the second attack since dawn, but the previous raid was declared by the air ministry to have been made by only two German planes—one of which was shot down—which boomed east London.

During this daylight action there was an undetermined number of civilian casualties but it was declared that nothing of military importance was hit.

A total of five German planes was destroyed during the day over England, the ministry said.

Now a Routine Horror

As the night assault began the streets were empty, the people were no longer interested in watching what now has become a routine honnor, returning every evening with the darkness.

An official of the new United States embassy in Grosvenor Square, Mayfair, stood on its roof and heard

Jackson Says Government Keeps Close Watch on Communist Groups

NEW YORK, Sept. 19 (AP)—Attorney General Robert H. Jackson said today that "counter-espionage is much more effective from our point of view than a number of arrests" and disclosed that the government was keeping all Nazi and Communists groups under surveillance.

"That is said to be an infringement on civil liberties, but I don't believe that because we are a tolerant people, we also have to be ignorant," he told convention delegates of the U. S. conference of mayors.

He said his department was not interested in sensationalism or "tips" from excited volunteer vigilantes. The attorney general said the mayors and community figures of good character were the best sources of information the department of justice had in its sabotage prevention work.

Closer to People

"You are closer to the people than your government in Washington can be," he said.

Another speaker, Howard O. Hunter, acting commissioner of the WPA, predicted the $5,000,000,000 in defense appropriations for fiscal 1941 would increase private employment by between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 persons. More than $500,000,000 had been spent by the WPA

Defense Board Lets Contracts For Upwards of $6,000,000,000

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP)—Donald M. Nelson, coordinator of defense purchases, reported tonight that the Defense Commission had cleared contracts totalling over $6,000,000,000.

"This amount exceeds by 300 percent," he said, "contract awards for any entire year of peacetime military procurement." Such divergent products as shoes, ships and machinery for manufacturing tanks were represented in the total. Delivery dates were not announced.

Outlining in a radio address some of the problems involved in the huge purchasing program, Nelson said that the broadest was fitting military defense requirements to productive capacity with a minimum of interference with normal business.

To that end, he said, the government was endeavoring to utilize off-season production.

"In addition, placing orders for military requirements in slack times reduces the overhead of the plant by employing its facilities at a higher level of capacity. This, in turn, results in lower prices both for civilian consumers and the government."

Nelson said that the government also was making its specifications conform as nearly as possible to commercial standards so that existing productive machinery could be used.

Nelson said attention also was given to areas of unemployment in letting contracts.

Gigantic Searchlights For the U. S. Army

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 19 (AP)—The United States army will have anti-aircraft searchlights so powerful that persons twelve miles away can read newspapers in the 800,000 candle power light.

Philip D. Reed, chairman of the board of General Electric Company, said today that among a dozen other things his company is manufacturing for national defense are the searchlights, five feet in diameter.

Toland Would Search for Fifth Columnists Inside Labor Board

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Sept. 19 (AP) — Declaring "a hint of radicalism permeates" the National Labor Relations Board personnel, Edmund M. Toland, general counsel for a Congressional investigation of the NLRB, said today that any "Fifth Column" search "might very well begin within" the board.

"Because it has been given jurisdiction over disputes between capital and labor," Toland told the metal mining convention of the American Mining Congress, the NLRB "is one of the most vital links in our defense program.

"Latest Act of Insolence"

Toland declared the board's latest act of insolence" was its refusal to abolish its division of economic research, headed by David J. Saposs, when it was "the intent of Congress to abolish the division."

Toland, calling Saposs "Russian-born," said he "has been identified through his life with various radical labor movements," and asserted the board retained him and his major subordinates by "utilizing the perfectly obvious subterfuge of merely changing the name of the division to the Technical Service Division."

He said there was "a close and intimate connection between Edwin S. Smith, NLRB member and Harry Bridges, Pacific coast CIO leader

Battered London Keeps Morale in Spite of Attacks

Thousands Cheer for King and Queen as Nazis Bomb City

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 19 — King's brother and Chelsea pensioner felt the sickening concussion of German bombs today and London, a bruised and weary giant of a city, pulled itself from the acrid smoke of the fiercest all-night attack of the war.

Through firelight streets, hundreds upon hundreds trudged in the early morning from one deep shelter smothered by the ruins of a big building, to others not so deep.

In London's Chelsea, the people waved their hats and cheered from the ruins of their homes for King George and Queen Elizabeth to hear.

In Chancery Lane and Inner Temple, the debris slid and sifted in the narrow streets and dim courts that Dickens wrote about in "Bleak House." But king's counselor in full-bottomed wig and solicitor's "clerk" in black coat and bowler hat went back to work.

Bank Votes Dividend

The bank, commented Norman, has been "somewhat upset", and he deplored the necessity for gathering "in this dreary catacomb."

Then, briskly, the directors declared a six percent dividend.

In southwest London, a time-bomb jarred the motor car of the Duke of Kent, youngest brother of the sovereign. Rubble showered the machine. The duke got out, unhurt, and men and women slapped him on the back.

Incendiary bombs showered down on the Chelsea Royal hospital, established in 1682 by Charles II. Awakened from their sleep, the 550 old soldiers there put out the fires.

Just across Westminster bridge from the houses of Parliament, the London county hall, one of the most modern buildings in the city, reeled crazily under the impact of a huge bomb.

Two Waitresses Killed

Two waitresses in the great grey stone building London's "city hall," were killed; 15 other persons were injured.

Other bombs hit the courtyard of the British museum, sprawling vault for an empire's treasures in Bloomsbury, and damaged the premises of the Wallace collection, in the end. The treasures that these buildings normally hold had been taken away long since.

In the inner temple, ancient inn of court, between the Strand and the Victoria embankment, a bomb dug a big hole by the side of the lofty library clock tower. Law books in a collection of some 70,000 were flung about floors.

Oxford circus got one of the worst bombings. Peter Robinson's spacious department store was wrecked. Both Oxford street and Regent street were closed.

One west end hotel got the full force of a great bomb which plunged through its roof, but the only missing guests were an army officer and his wife whose room was a smear of debris.

Yet it was the homes and the apartments of the people that got the worst of all "these wanton attacks," the officials said.

"Provisionally," they estimated ninety dead and 350 wounded over last night.

in five years on national defense projects, mostly in construction of airports and development of highways, he added.

Earlier, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, conference president, expressed belief "we have an eighty to eighty-five percent possibility of avoiding war — if we proceed with our national defense program."

"But if we are weak in any point, we will find this country in a difficult situation," he added.

Mayor La Guardia predicted that WPA work would be terminated by next June because of the defense program and the draft, but pointed out that this was only his "personal guess" and was not based on any official information.

Special trains are scheduled to leave Hanoi for Haiphong tomorrow and all local Japanese completed preparations to leave.

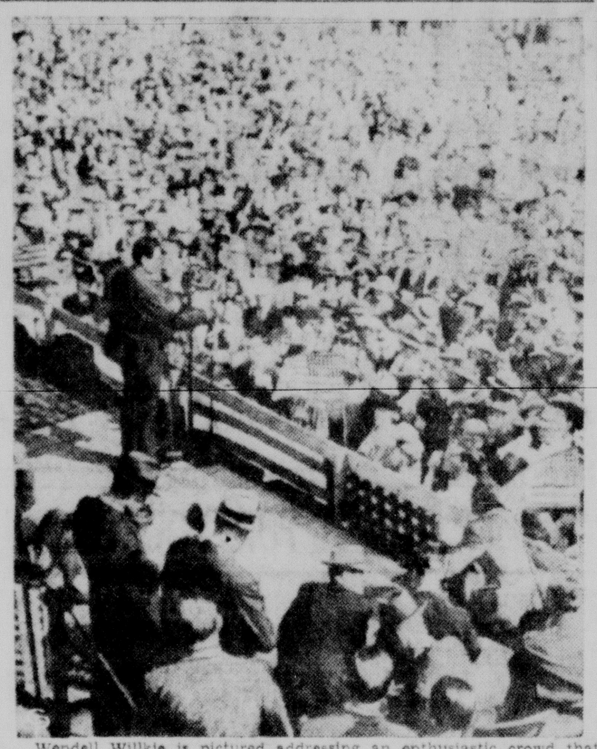

However, a spokesman said tonight it still was possible that an eleventh hour turn in the negotiations might delay the departure of Major General Issaku Nishihara, head of the Japanese delegation.

Injured Girl Remains In Serious Condition

Dolly Mae Cook, 12, of Corriganville, who was seriously injured Wednesday night in a bicycle-automobile accident on the Mt. Savage road, remained in "serious" condition last night at Allegany hospital.

She suffered a rupture of the abdominal wall, other intestinal injuries and cuts and bruises when struck by the car driven by Vincent Petenbrink, also of Corriganville.

AS WILLKIE INVADED PACIFIC COAST

Wendell Willkie is pictured addressing an enthusiastic crowd that greeted him at San Bernardino, Cal., as he swung his presidential campaign tour into California. The Republican nominee spoke briefly on the new defense program and the "rehabilitation" of industry "by putting men in office who know something about production."

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

There are strong hints in the controlled German and Italian press that Herr Hitler's scheduled invasion of England may be postponed until next year. It's the first time since the Battle of Britain opened three months ago that Axis commentators have admitted such a possibility.

Whether the weather, the sheer pluck with which the British public is enduring the incessant bomb attacks, the work of British fighter plane pilots, or a combination of all three factors is responsible only Berlin knows.

At any rate, it is to be noted that the Axis commentators are now fervently striving to center the German and Italian public's attention on the Ribbentrop-Ciano conference in Rome, stressed as portending "vital" new strategic moves to smash the British empire.

Is Blow to Hitler

Obviously, the primary purpose of this is to gloss over what appears to be a blow to Hitler's personal prestige. He recently told Britain and the world, in jeering tones, not to be impatient over the delay in his highly-advertised invasion. He announced definitely that he was "coming."

Yet from both Berlin and Rome now come intimations with some official flavor that he may not be coming, after all, until next year, and that meanwhile the German-Italian Axis mates, with possible Spanish assistance, plan major winter operations at both ends of Britain's life line in the Mediterranean.

Large Winter Order

That is quite a large order for one winter. Dispersal of the British fleet in the eastern Mediterranean by aerial destruction of its Alexandria base that controls the Suez canal is the objective of the Italian spearhead drive down the Egyptian coast.

Axis capture, or even a siege, of Gibraltar, which would require Spanish participation in the war in some fashion, is the other major item supposed to be on the Rome conference agenda.

The slender and highly vulnerable Italian drive to oust the British from Egypt and blast the Alexandria fleet base has thus far met no serious British resistance. It still has a terrible stretch of waterless and virtually roadless desert to travel before British power can be seriously jeopardized in the eastern Mediterranean.

That the Italian drive can maintain its initial speed against stiffening British resistance is a physical impossibility.

Every mile of exhausting advance means added exposure of Italian supply lines.

German forces cannot get there in large numbers while British sea power dominates the Egyptian coast. Nor has Germany available any troops seasoned to fight in a desert theater where mid-day temperatures range up to 125 degrees.

Willkie Advocates

"We cannot stand still behind the guns of our battleships. In order to be strong we must grow.

"Democracy can persist only so long as its people are busy. x x x I therefore propose to put an end to this industrial stagnation. I propose to establish in this country the only kind of life that you and I understand A life of good, honest work and good, honest reward.

"I propose to free America from an administration which has proved itself incompetent and not to be trusted with the enormous powers that it has acquired."

The candidate said that the problem of business expansion narrows down to the question, "is there a chance of a profit that will justify the risk?"

Scores Administration

President Roosevelt's administration, he declared, has hindered business by subjecting it "to abuse, to the imposition of capricious and constantly changing rules, and to continual discouragement."

"Now," said Willkie, "what has the New Deal been doing? It has been pursuing policies which increase the difficulty of answering that simple question (of making a business a profit).

"It has increased the difficulty in many ways. It has done it by making unpredictable changes in laws and regulations. It has done it by setting up punitive taxes. It has done it by increasing red tape, by investigations and by other nuisances that add to costs.

"It has done it by vesting discretionary powers in the hands of administrative officials, many of whom are hostile to the enterprises they regulate.

"And it has done all this at a time when changing and uncertain conditions of world affairs have already made it difficult for business men to figure out their prospects and keep up their courage."

The New Deal's tax system, Willkie asserted, "is unjust and discriminatory.

"It is driving capital out of productive employment," he added. "It is preventing the creation of the new enterprises that our dynamic system must have, the enterprises that make jobs.

"The New Deal taxes put a premium on the investment of money in all types of government securities, and drive money out of productive enterprise."

The Republican presidential nominee told his audience it was obvious that "the best tax system in the world will not balance the budget for us at the present time."

Besides ordinary federal expenditures, he said, the nation must bear the "staggering cost" of a defense program.

"Also," Willkie said, "until we get the unemployed back to work we must spend large sums for relief.

"And it is our social duty to maintain and expand a program of old age pensions and aid to the blind, the needy and dependent children."

Saying that the country cannot hope to pay for such things by increasing taxes, because that would "crush industry and cause more unemployment," the candidate added:

"The best we can do is to stimulate production immediately and revise the tax system so that it will not act as a brake."

Britain's Fleet Shells Italians

Egypt-Italian Coastline Bombarded; Damage Is Heavy

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Sept. 19 (AP)—Britain's battle fleet has gone into violent action to demonstrate its mastery of the Mediterranean and to harass Italy's advancing expeditionary force along the 350-mile Egyptian-Libyan coastline.

All along the coast, the British say, the bombardment caused heavy damage to the invading columns.

The fleet's mighty guns burst against Italian land positions night before last after it had made a three weeks' sweep of the Mediterranean and Algean seas.

"This new sweep of the Mediterranean and this blasting of enemy concentrations ashore is new proof of our mastery of the sea and air," said an officer aboard one of the warships.

"In the entire 2,500 mile trip no Italian warship appeared and though the fleet frequently was shadowed by enemy planes, they made no attempt to bomb us. Destroyers made an attack on two submarines with depth charges. Huge patches of oil appeared on the surface of the sea after both attacks."

From Sidi Barrani to Salum—in Egypt—the fire of the fleet raked Italian troop concentrations and newly established supply bases.

The shelling came within forty-eight hours after the Italians had dug in at Sidi Barrani. The British maintained that it took the Italians by surprise and caused widespread damage.

The fleet also heavily shelled the Libyan port of Bengasi, 300 miles west of Salum, simultaneously with a British air bombardment.

The British claimed destruction of many hangars and airplanes at Bengasi, enemy transports at Buqbuo in Egypt and the blasting of artillery emplacements at Sidi Barrani as the result of air attacks in the last seventy-two hours.

Tydings Critical of New Deal Spending

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 19 (AP) — Senator Millard E. Tydings (D-Md) said today that unless the government begins to "take stock of the future, to evolve a policy of 'pay as you go', dire consequences are in store for all the people of the nation, rich and poor."

Noting that the national debt approximates fifty billion dollars, Tydings told the Pittsburgh Life Underwriters' Association and the Chamber of Commerce that "the time to act is now." At present, he said, "there is no need of fear", but added:

"It would be folly to continue to run the government, insofar as its peace-time activities are concerned, without either reducing the peace-time expenses, raising additional peace-time revenue, or a combination of both.

"If it is not done soon, we will then be confronted with real danger which may tax the resources of this country to a degree far beyond our comprehension."

32 Before Draft, Man Is Now 36 Years Old

BALTIMORE, Sept. 19 (AP)—Both father and the elections board have erred in a vital matter of age, a man told court Clerk Frank C. Robey, whose marriage license business has boomed since conscription stimulated cupid.

Father said in his naturalization papers that son was born in 1910, the elections board had the age 32.

"Well, how old are you really?" the clerk asked.

"Why, thirty-six of course."

Senate. His policy is a personal policy, and his platform an individual one.

"What reason," McNutt asked, "is there to suppose that a man who can bring no semblance of agreement or solidarity in that party that is seeking to elect him president of the United States can bring to the processes of government that unity of purpose and resolve which the nation requires in a world-shattering crisis?"

He asked "what are the qualities of leadership which are effective in a Democratic community," and declared:

Belittles Leadership

"They involve, first of all, the ability to influence other men by the powers of reason—to affect other men's judgment and thereby induce them to action. They require capacity to inspire the common run of citizens, to evoke from them that mysterious wisdom that emerges from their collective judgment—to arouse in them that strange nobility which enables ordinary men to accomplish extraordinary things.

"These are the qualities that have made Franklin Roosevelt a great leader among the men of today's world. They are the qualities that have enabled him to lead the Democratic party to the greatest achievements of its history.

"And in none of these respects has the titular head of the Republican party revealed the slightest capacity."

Introduced By Lane

McNutt was introduced by W. Preston Lane of Hagerstown, Maryland Democratic National Committeeman, who said "you are welcome in Maryland because the people of this state have full realization of the services you have contributed in various capacities to the advancement of this country."

Lane praised McNutt for withdrawing his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination by suying "we have taken cognizance of your wholly unselfish attitude in placing personal ambitions aside in the interest of the party as a whole.

"This gathering may be regarded as a testimony of our faith in Democratic principles. I am confident it may also be regarded as an indication of our purpose to put Maryland well in the lead of the states which will contribute to the victory of our party in November."

Others who attended and spoke briefly included Governor O'Conor, Senator George L. Radcliffe, Baltimore Mayor Howard W. Jackson and Maryland Democratic Congressional nominees.

Radcliffe Backs Roosevelt

Radcliffe, in his first major pronouncement since the campaign began, defended the third term for Mr. Roosevelt and said that whatever Willkie's "ability may be, (he) has had, I believe, no experience as a public official."

The senator said that if events had dictated, both Presidents Lincoln and Wilson might have been elected for a third term.

"If Lincon's second term had come to an end while the civil war was in progress, would he have been willing to run again for president?

"You will remember that Lincoln laid stock upon the idea that it wis not wise to swap horses in the middle of the stream.

"Also, if Woodrow Wilson's second term had ended before the great war was over, would he likewise have been willing to run again, and would the people of the United States have chosen him for a third term?

"This is a matter of speculation necessarily, but my guess is that both Lincoln and Wilson would have been elected for a third term."

Roosevelt Speaks Today in Phila.

Will Also Inspect Army and Navy Defense Projects

By The Associated Press

Wendell Willkie's speechmaking tour took him last night (Thursday) to the Pacific coast, while his Democratic opponent, President Roosevelt, headed for Philadelphia to make a talk of an undisclosed nature today.

The Republican nominee arrived in Los Angeles last night to make what campaign managers had designated as one of the major talks of his swing across the country.

On his way through California Willkie called for the reelection of Senator Hiram Johnson as a "great, fighting, fearless Liberal." Johnson, who supported President Roosevelt in the 1932 election, heard at Washington of Willkie's remarks without comment, asserting only that "I'm not going to say anything until I get back there."

Recently Mr. Roosevelt let it be known he thought Johnson no longer could be considered the same "liberal" who supported him eight years ago.

President Roosevelt is to inspect army and navy defense projects in the Philadelphia area today in addition to making an address at convention hall in connection with a bicentennial celebration of the University of Pennsylvania.

White House officials said they didn't know whether the speech would be of a political nature.

Edward J. Flynn, Democratic chairman, told reporters at New York that Willkie was playing "hop-skip-and-jump" on campaign issues with the "result that he says nothing." Previously Flynn had accused Willkie of being "emotionally unstable."

John D. M. Hamilton, Republican chairman, commented on this latter statement:

"If I were supporting the ticket Mr. Flynn is supporting I would not make any cracks about anyone else's emotional instability."

Secretary Ickes told a press conference that "it is a true and indisputable fact that the appeasers are all supporting" Willkie—an assertion made recently by the Democratic vice presidential nominee, Henry A. Wallace.

"And," Ickes added, "there is a very obvious reason to ask 'why?' "

Sudden Pre-Dawn

mighty bursts of the bombs and ground guns.

The raiders, plunging through dirty weather, were flying lower than usual and it appeared they had first arrived by an unaccustomed route over northwestern London.

British fighter planes were noisily —and hazardously—active aloft, diving in and out of the cloud banks.

The city's ten million front-liners in this hottest sector of a war from the skies rushed again to shelter.

Thousands stood in defiant queues in the subway stations, despite official warnings not to choke transit facilities.

After a day in which there was but one daylight alarm, following a night of sheer terror, they were ready to spend another night down in the earth.

Face Dismal Prospects

The day's developments suggested that not merely weeks but a winter underground is in prospect for London.

The government established a special committee to inquire into the state of public health.

To meet the widespread and urgent demand for emergency sleeping equipment, the board of trade lifted its restrictions to permit an unhindered supply of mattresses to the municipal authorities.

The London press made insistent demands for better air raid shelters and better arrangements for the ten millions who are the involuntary participants in this war.

But, the authoritative British Press Association reported, the prime minister and government are convinced that "deep or heavily protected" shelters were impossible to construct in wartime and that the job would be "more or less impracticable" even in peace time.

Warning to Public

William Mabane, the parliamentary secretary to the ministry of Home Security, urged the public not to leave the small "Anderson" shelters at their homes for public shelters, saying it deprived others of shelter.

The ministry of home security, recapitulating the effect of the daily and nightly raids, said the Germans had done but little military damage. It said they had destroyed but two per cent of the supplies of oil, damaging one aircraft factory and one big gas plant.

There had been no serious damage to shipyards, it was added, none to heavy industry and only negligible damage to arsenals.

As to oil, it was declared that the loss already had been made up and that there was a great reserve storage capacity for incoming stocks.

The ministry's spokesman acknowledged that London had taken a terrible beating, but said the damage was not vital industrially or militarily; that all losses here had been more than compensated by increased production elsewhere.

During the day the censorship was sharpened to prevent publication for cabling abroad of the time of London raid alarms—their beginning or their end. The censor said instant publication was prejudical to security.

The censors held dispatches for an hour in most cases and sometimes for several hours.

Bomb French Cities

As the Nazis continued to pound this city without pause, the Royal Air Force went on with a persistent thoroughness to smash German invasion basis as fast as they can be repaired from previous attacks.

The air ministry said British bombers, continuing to "disconcert the enemy's invasion plans," had returned again with tons of bombs to the ports of Antwerp, Zeebrugge, Dunkerque, Ostend, Calais, Bouglogne, Dieppe and Le Havre.

Acting in concert, other bombers attacked the key Nazi centers of Osnabruck, Ehrang, Hamm, Mannheim and Brussels, as well as a convoy off Borkum, in one more effort to lay a barrier to troop movements toward the channel through those cities.

plus an additional exemption of $10,000; or determine the excess as the amount over an eight percent return on invested capital and an added exemption of $8,000.

Republicans Against Bill

Only one Republican—Senator Townsend of Delaware—voted for the bill on final passage. Five Democrats—Bilbo of Mississippi, Clark of Missouri, Downey of California, Hill of Alabama and Holt of West Virginia—opposed it.

There was no roll call vote on Connally's war profits amendment. It was adopted by the Senate earlier this year and rejected in conference with the House. Chairman Harrison (D-Miss) said he would "fight diligently" for it in conference but added that he didn't "know whether I can persuade the House conferees or not."

The Senate adopted an amendment by Senator Pittman (D-Nev) which would permit a corporation to include only three years of the four-year base period in computing its average earnings if it had suffered a loss in one year.

Earlier the Senate rejected, forty-four to thirty, an amendment to permit the federal government to tax income from future state and local bond issues, and the states and localities to tax future federal issues.

Pythians Call on O'Conor for Probe of Consolidation Program

MIDLAND, Sept. 19 — Allegany county school consolidation dispute, in which hundreds of parents are keeping their children out of school, has had state-wide repercussions it was learned here today.

Walter E. Ross and Thomas H. Taylor, returning here from a Knights of Pythias convention in Baltimore, revealed that the grand lodge of Maryland yesterday unanimously adopted a resolution calling on Governor O'Conor "to cause a thorough investigation of the program instituted by the board of education of Allegany county in the consolidation of the public schools in certain communities . . . so that the economic, moral and spiritual life of those communities will be preserved and several hundred students returned to their class-rooms."

The resolution is preceded by a series of "whereas" clauses in which the state organization proclaims itself "the staunch defender of the theory that the public schools constitute the very foundation of American democracy" and declares the fact that 800 students are remaining out of school in Allegany county constitutes "a serious threat to our American institutions, as the public school is woven into the very fabric of our conception of government."

Calling attention to the fact that public school authorities have "embarked upon widespread consolidation of public schools, particularly in Allegany county," the resolution said this had "disastrous effects to at least nine separate communities" whose schools were abandoned.

Copies of the resolution were ordered sent to Governor O'Conor, the state board of education and the Allegany county board of education.

The resolution was drafted by a special committee headed by State Senator Robert B. Kimble, Cumberland, and including John Nesbeth, George McKee, Robert Hutcheson and William Shaffer, all of Cumberland; Owen Price, of Frostburg; and Walted E. Ross of Midland.

It received an unfavorable report from the resolutions committee, it was reported, but the matter was taken to the floor, where, after talks by Kimble, Ross and Taylor, the committee was overruled and the resolution unanimously adopted.

Ross and Taylor also reported they were unable to confer with Dr. Albert S. Cook, state superintendent of schools. Cook told them, they said, that he would not talk with them, but would furnish them a stenographer to whom they could dictate anything they cared to say.

As to the appeal of the citizens committee from the county board's decision on the consolidation progress, Dr. Cook said he would answer it in writing, according to the Midland men.

Their reception at Dr. Cook's office was "cool." Ross and Taylor said, the state school head declaring at one point there had been "too much publicity" about the matter.

Toland cited, too, that Smith had served as United States secretary for the League against War and Fascism. He said Earl Browder, United States Communist chief, described this group, later called the American League for Peace and Democracy, as a "transmission belt for Communism."

He declared a "large number" of the board's legal staff were members of the NLRB employees union, a vertical union affiliated with the American League for Peace and Democracy.

"Our defense program cannot be accomplished as long as this government agency is permitted to champion one element of labor, override the rights of employers and other groups, and maintain and foster radicals," Toland concluded.

Battered London Keeps Morale in Spite of Attacks

Thousands Cheer for King and Queen as Nazis Bomb City

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 19 — King's brother and Chelsea pensioner felt the sickening concussion of German bombs today and London, a bruised and weary giant of a city, pulled itself from the acrid smoke of the fiercest all-night attack of the war.

Through firelight streets, hundreds upon hundreds trudged in the early morning from one deep shelter smothered by the ruins of a big building, to others not so deep.

In London's Chelsea, the people waved their hats and cheered from the ruins of their homes for King George and Queen Elizabeth to hear.

In Chancery Lane and Inner Temple, the debris slid and sifted in the narrow streets and dim courts that Dickens wrote about in "Bleak House." But king's counselor in full-bottomed wig and solicitor's "clerk" in black coat and bowler hat went back to work.

Bank Votes Dividend

Way down below Threadneedle street, white-whiskered Montague Norman and the directors of the Bank of England met in the vaults.

The bank, commented Norman, has been "somewhat upset", and he deplored the necessity for gathering "in this dreary catacomb."

Then, briskly, the directors declared a six percent dividend.

In southwest London, a time-bomb jarred the motor car of the Duke of Kent, youngest brother of the sovereign. Rubble showered the machine. The duke got out, unhurt, and men and women slapped him on the back.

Incendiary bombs showered down on the Chelsea Royal hospital, established in 1682 by Charles II. Awakened from their sleep, the 550 old soldiers there put out the fires.

Just across Westminster bridge from the houses of Parliament, the London county hall, one of the most modern buildings in the city, reeled crazily under the impact of a huge bomb.

Two Waitresses Killed

Two waitresses in the great grey stone building, London's "city hall," were killed; 15 other persons were injured.

Other bombs hit the courtyard of the British museum, sprawling vault for an empire's treasures in Bloomsbury, and damaged the premises of the Wallace collection, in the end. The treasures that these buildings normally hold had been taken away long since.

In the inner temple, ancient inn of court, between the Strand and the Victoria embankment, a bomb dug a big hole by the side of the lofty library clock tower. Law books in a collection of some 70,000 were flung about floors.

Oxford circus got one of the worst bombings. Peter Robinson's spacious department store was wrecked. Both Oxford street and Regent street were closed.

One west end hotel got the full force of a great bomb which plunged through its roof, but the only missing guests were an army officer and his wife whose room was a smear of debris.

Yet it was the homes and the apartments of the people that got the worst of all "these wanton attacks," the officials said.

"Provisionally," they estimated ninety dead and 350 wounded over last night.

Earlier, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, conference president, expressed belief "we have an eighty to eighty-five percent possibility of avoiding war — if we proceed with our national defense program."

"But if we are weak in any point, we will find this country in a difficult situation," he added.

Mayor La Guardia predicted that WPA work would be terminated by next June because of the defense program and the draft, but pointed out that this was only his "personal guess" and was not based on any official information.

Special trains are scheduled to leave Hanoi for Haiphong tomorrow and all local Japanese completed preparations to leave.

However, a spokesman said tonight it still was possible that an eleventh hour turn in the negotiations might delay the departure of Major General Issaku Nishihara, head of the Japanese delegation.

Injured Girl Remains In Serious Condition

Dolly Mae Cook, 12, of Corriganville, who was seriously injured Wednesday night in a bicycle-automobile accident on the Mt. Savage road, remained in "serious" condition last night at Allegany hospital.

She suffered a rupture of the abdominal wall, other intestinal injuries and cuts and bruises when struck by the car driven by Vincent Fetenbrink, also of Corriganville.

AS WILLKIE INVADED PACIFIC COAST

Wendell Willkie is pictured addressing an enthusiastic crowd that greeted him at San Bernardino, Cal., as he swung his presidential campaign tour into California. The Republican nominee spoke briefly on the new defense program and the "rehabilitation" of industry "by putting men in office who know something about production."

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

There are strong hints in the controlled German and Italian press that Herr Hitler's scheduled invasion of England may be postponed until next year. It's the first time since the Battle of Britain opened three months ago that Axis commentators have admitted such a possibility.

Whether the weather, the sheer pluck with which the British public is enduring the incessant bomb attacks, the work of British fighter plane pilots, or a combination of all three factors is responsible only Berlin knows.

At any rate, it is to be noted that the Axis commentators are now fervently striving to center the German and Italian public's attention on the Ribbentrop-Ciano conference in Rome, stressed as portending "vital" new strategic moves to smash the British empire.

Is Blow to Hitler

Obviously, the primary purpose of this is to gloss over what appears to be a blow to Hitler's personal prestige. He recently told Britain and the world, in jeering tones, not to be impatient over the delay in his highly-advertised invasion. He announced definitely that he was "coming."

Yet from both Berlin and Rome now come intimations with some official flavor that he may not be coming, after all, until next year, and that meanwhile the German-Italian Axis mates, with possible Spanish assistance, plan major winter operations at both ends of Britain's life line in the Mediterranean.

Large Winter Order

That is quite a large order for one winter. Dispersal of the British fleet in the eastern Mediterranean by aerial destruction of its Alexandria base that controls the Suez canal is the objective of the Italian spearhead drive down the Egyptian coast.

Axis capture, or even a siege, of Gibraltar, which would require Spanish participation in the war in some fashion, is the other major item supposed to be on the Rome conference agenda.

The slender and highly vulnerable Italian drive to oust the British from Egypt and blast the Alexandria fleet base has thus far met no serious British resistance. It still has a terrible stretch of waterless and virtually roadless desert to travel before British power can be seriously jeopardized in the eastern Mediterranean.

That the Italian drive can maintain its initial speed against stiffening British resistance is a physical impossibility.

Every mile of exhausting advance means added exposure of Italian supply lines.

German forces cannot get there in large numbers while British sea power dominates the Egyptian coast. Nor has Germany available any troops seasoned to fight in a desert theater where mid-day temperatures range up to 125 degrees.

Willkie Advocates

"We cannot stand still behind the guns of our battleships. In order to be strong we must grow.

"Democracy can persist only so long as its people are busy. x x x I therefore propose to put an end to this industrial stagnation. I propose to establish in this country the only kind of life that you and I understand. A life of good, honest work and good, honest reward.

"I propose to free America from an administration which has proved itself incompetent and not to be trusted with the enormous powers that it has acquired."

The candidate said that the problem of business expansion narrows down to the question, "is there a chance of a profit that will justify the risk?"

Scores Administration

President Roosevelt's administration, he declared, has hindered business by subjecting it "to abuse, to the imposition of capricious and constantly changing rules, and to continual discouragement."

"Now," said Willkie, "what has the New Deal been doing? It has been pursuing policies which increase the difficulty of answering that simple question (of making a business a profit).

"It has increased the difficulty in many ways. It has done it by making unpredictable changes in laws and regulations. It has done it by setting up punitive taxes. It has done it by increasing red tape, by investigations and by other nuisances that add to costs.

"It has done it by vesting discretionary powers in the hands of administrative officials, many of whom are hostile to the enterprises they regulate.

"And it has done all this at a time when changing and uncertain conditions of world affairs have already made it difficult for business men to figure out their prospects and keep up their courage."

The New Deal's tax system, Willkie asserted, "is unjust and discriminatory.

"It is driving capital out of productive employment," he added. "It is preventing the creation of the new enterprises that our dynamic system must have, the enterprises that make jobs.

"The New Deal taxes put a premium on the investment of money in all types of government securities, and drive money out of productive enterprise."

The Republican presidential nominee told his audience it was obvious that "the best tax system in the world will not balance the budget for us at the present time."

Besides ordinary federal expenditures, he said, the nation must bear the "staggering cost" of a defense program.

"Also," Willkie said, "until we get the unemployed back to work we must spend large sums for relief.

"And it is our social duty to maintain and expand a program of old age pensions and aid to the blind, the needy and dependent children."

Saying that the country cannot hope to pay for such things by increasing taxes, because that would "crush industry and cause more unemployment," the candidate added:

"The best we can do is to stimulate production immediately and revise the tax system so that it will not act as a brake."

warded to be printed by the millions locally, and were the first of sixty-four cards, questionnaires, placards, and booklets, which will be sent out. The total printing bill, it is estimated, will run to $1,500,000.

Army officials computed that they would need 32,000,000 registration cards, 24,000,000 registration certificates and 24,000,000 questionnaires. No explanation was given as to the size of these figures when compared with 16,500,000 who are to be registered.

At the White House, the day produced the appointment of a committee to cooperate with the National Defense Commission on all phases of public health.

Mr. Roosevelt, acting under the authority of a 1916 law, named a group of five headed by Dr. Irvin Abell of Louisville, Ky., chairman of the Board of Regents of the American College of Surgeons. Other members are Dr. Lewis H. Weed, chairman of the division of medical sciences of the national research counsel; Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntyre, surgeon general of the Navy and White House physician, Major General James C. Magee, army surgeon general, and Dr. Thomas Parran, head of the public health service.

McIntyre said problems for the committee would be mustering 16,000 physicians to examine men called under the draft act, and seeing that military needs for medical help were filled without upsetting the "civilian side" of medical care.

Britain's Fleet Shells Italians

Egypt-Italian Coastline Bombarded; Damage Is Heavy

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Sept. 19 (AP)—Britain's battle fleet has gone into violent action to demonstrate its mastery of the Mediterranean and to harass Italy's advancing expeditionary force along the 350-mile Egyptian-Libyan coastline.

All along the coast, the British say, the bombardment caused heavy damage to the invading columns.

The fleet's mighty guns burst against Italian land positions night before last after it had made a three weeks' sweep of the Mediterranean and Aegean seas.

"This new sweep of the Mediterranean and this blasting of enemy concentrations ashore is new proof of our mastery of the sea and air," said an officer aboard one of the warships.

"In the entire 2,500 mile trip no Italian warship appeared and though the fleet frequently was shadowed by enemy planes, they made no attempt to bomb us. Destroyers made an attack on two submarines with depth charges. Huge patches of oil appeared on the surface of the sea after both attacks."

From Sidi Barrani to Salum—in Egypt—the fire of the fleet raked Italian troop concentrations and newly established supply bases.

The shelling came within forty-eight hours after the Italians had dug in at Sidi Barrani. The British maintained that it took the Italians by surprise and caused widespread damage.

The fleet also heavily shelled the Libyan port of Bengasi, 300 miles west of Salum, simultaneously with a British air bombardment.

The British claimed destruction of many hangars and airplanes at Bengasi, enemy transports at Bu-qbuo in Egypt and the blasting of artillery emplacements at Sidi Barrani as the result of air attacks in the last seventy-two hours.

Tydings Critical of New Deal Spending

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 19 (AP) — Senator Millard E. Tydings (D-Md) said today that unless the government begins to "take stock of the future, to evolve a policy of 'pay as you go', dire consequences are in store for all the people of the nation, rich and poor."

Noting that the national debt approximates fifty billion dollars, Tydings told the Pittsburgh Life Underwriters' Association and the Chamber of Commerce that "the time to act is now." At present, he said, "there is no need of fear", but added:

"It would be folly to continue to run the government, insofar as its peace-time activities are concerned, without either reducing the peace-time expenses, raising additional peace-time revenue, or a combination of both.

"If it is not done soon, we will then be confronted with real danger which may tax the resources of this country to a degree far beyond our comprehension."

32 Before Draft, Man Is Now 36 Years Old

BALTIMORE, Sept. 19 (AP)—Both father and the elections board have erred in a vital matter of age, a man told court Clerk Frank C. Robey, whose marriage license business has boomed since conscription stimulated cupid.

Father said in his naturalization papers that son was born in 1910, the elections board had the age 32.

"Well, how old are you really?" the clerk asked.

Senate. His policy is a personal policy, and his platform an individual one.

"What reason," McNutt asked, "is there to suppose that a man who can bring no semblance of agreement or solidarity in that party that is seeking to elect him president of the United States can bring to the processes of government that unity of purpose and resolve which the nation requires in a world-shattering crisis?"

He asked "what are the qualities of leadership which are effective in a Democratic community," and declared:

Belittles Leadership

"They involve, first of all, the ability to influence other men by the powers of reason—to affect other men's judgment and thereby induce them to action. They require capacity to inspire the common run of citizens, to evoke from them that mysterious wisdom that emerges from their collective judgment—to arouse in them that strange nobility which enables ordinary men to accomplish extraordinary things.

"These are the qualities that have made Franklin Roosevelt a great leader among the men of today's world. They are the qualities that have enabled him to lead the Democratic party to the greatest achievements of its history.

"And in none of these respects has the titular head of the Republican party revealed the slightest capacity."

Introduced By Lane

McNutt was introduced by W. Preston Lane of Hagerstown, Maryland Democratic National Committeeman, who said "you are welcome in Maryland because the people of this state have full realization of the services you have contributed in various capacities to the advancement of this country."

Lane praised McNutt for withdrawing his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination by suying "we have taken cognizance of your wholly unselfish attitude in placing personal ambitions aside in the interest of the party as a whole.

"This gathering may be regarded as a testimony of our faith in Democratic principles. I am confident it may also be regarded as an indication of our purpose to put Maryland well in the lead of the states which will contribute to the victory of our party in November."

Others who attended and spoke briefly included Governor O'Conor, Senator George L. Radcliffe, Baltimore Mayor Howard W. Jackson and Maryland Democratic Congressional nominees.

Radcliffe Backs Roosevelt

Radcliffe, in his first major pronouncement since the campaign began, defended the third term for Mr. Roosevelt and said that whatever Willkie's "ability may be, (he) has had, I believe, no experience as a public official."

The senator said that if events had dictated, both Presidents Lincoln and Wilson might have been elected for a third term.

"If Lincon's second term had come to an end while the civil war was in progress, would he have been willing to run again for president?

"You will remember that Lincoln laid stock upon the idea that it was not wise to swap horses in the middle of the stream.

"Also, if Woodrow Wilson's second term had ended before the great war was over, would he likewise have been willing to run again, and would the people of the United States have chosen him for a third term?

"This is a matter of speculation necessarily, but my guess is that both Lincoln and Wilson would have been elected for a third term."

Roosevelt Speaks Today in Phila.

Will Also Inspect Army and Navy Defense Projects

By The Associated Press

Wendell Willkie's speechmaking tour took him last night (Thursday) to the Pacific coast, while his Democratic opponent, President Roosevelt, headed for Philadelphia to make a talk of an undisclosed nature today.

The Republican nominee arrived in Los Angeles last night to make what campaign managers had designated as one of the major talks of his swing across the country.

On his way through California Willkie called for the reelection of Senator Hiram Johnson as a "great, fighting, fearless Liberal." Johnson, who supported President Roosevelt in the 1932 election, heard at Washington of Willkie's remarks without comment, asserting only that "I'm not going to say anything until I get back there."

Recently Mr. Roosevelt let it be known he thought Johnson no longer could be considered the same "liberal" who supported him eight years ago.

President Roosevelt is to inspect army and navy defense projects in the Philadelphia area today in addition to making an address at convention hall in connection with a bicentennial celebration of the University of Pennsylvania.

White House officials said they didn't know whether the speech would be of a political nature.

Edward J. Flynn, Democratic chairman, told reporters at New York that Willkie was playing "hop-skip-and-jump" on campaign issues with the "result that he says nothing." Previously Flynn had accused Willkie of being "emotionally unstable."

John D. M. Hamilton, Republican chairman, commented on this latter statement:

"If I were supporting the ticket Mr. Flynn is supporting I would not make any cracks about anyone else's emotional instability."

Secretary Ickes told a press conference that "it is a true and indisputable fact that the appeasers are all supporting" Willkie—an assertion made recently by the Democratic vice presidential nominee, Henry A. Wallace.

"And," Ickes added, "there is a very obvious reason to ask 'why?'"

Sudden Pre-Dawn

mighty bursts of the bombs and ground guns.

The raiders, plunging through dirty weather, were flying lower than usual and it appeared they had first arrived by an unaccustomed route over northwestern London.

British fighter planes were noisily —and hazardously—active aloft, diving in and out of the cloud banks.

The city's ten million front-liners in this hottest sector of a war from the skies rushed again to shelter.

Thousands stood in defiant queues in the subway stations, despite official warnings not to choke transit facilities.

After a day in which there was but one daylight alarm, following a night of sheer terror, they were ready to spend another night down in the earth.

Face Dismal Prospects

The day's developments suggested that not merely weeks but a winter underground is in prospect for London.

The government established a special committee to inquire into the state of public health.

To meet the widespread and urgent demand for emergency sleeping equipment, the board of trade lifted its restrictions to permit an unhindered supply of mattresses to the municipal authorities.

The London press made insistent demands for better air raid shelters and better arrangements for the ten millions who are the involuntary participants in this war.

But, the authoritative British Press Association reported, the prime minister and government are convinced that "deep or heavily protected" shelters were impossible to construct in wartime and that the job would be "more or less impracticable" even in peace time.

Warning to Public

William Mabane, the parliamentary secretary to the ministry of Home Security, urged the public not to leave the small "Anderson" shelters at their homes for public shelters, saying it deprived others of shelter.

The ministry of home security, recapitulating the effect of the daily and nightly raids, said the Germans had done but little military damage. It said they had destroyed but two per cent of the supplies of oil, damaging one aircraft factory and one big gas plant.

There had been no serious damage to shipyards, it was added, none to heavy industry and only negligible damage to arsenals.

As to oil, it was declared that the loss already had been made up and that there was a great reserve storage capacity for incoming stocks.

The ministry's spokesman acknowledged that London had taken a terrible beating, but said the damage was not vital industrially or militarily; that all losses here had been more than compensated by increased production elsewhere.

During the day the censorship was sharpened to prevent publication for cabling abroad of the time of London raid alarms—their beginning or their end. The censor said instant publication was prejudical to security.

The censors held dispatches for an hour in most cases and sometimes for several hours.

Bomb French Cities

As the Nazis continued to pound this city without pause, the Royal Air Force went on with a persistent thoroughness to smash German invasion basis as fast as they can be repaired from previous attacks.

The air ministry said British bombers, continuing to "disconcert the enemy's invasion plans," had returned again with tons of bombs to the ports of Antwerp, Zeebrugge, Dunkerque, Ostend, Calais, Bouglogne, Dieppe and Le Havre.

Acting in concert, other bombers attacked the key Nazi centers of Osnabruck, Ehrang, Hamm, Mannheim and Brussels, as well as a convoy off Borkum, in one more effort to lay a barrier to troop movements toward the channel through those cities.

Pythians Call on O'Conor for Probe of Consolidation Program

MIDLAND, Sept. 19 — Allegany county school consolidation dispute, in which hundreds of parents are keeping their children out of school, has had state-wide repercussions it was learned here today.

Walter E. Ross and Thomas H. Taylor, returning here from a Knights of Pythias convention in Baltimore, revealed that the grand lodge of Maryland yesterday unanimously adopted a resolution calling on Governor O'Conor "to cause a thorough investigation of the program instituted by the board of education of Allegany county in the consolidation of the public schools in certain communities . . . so that the economic, moral and spiritual life of those communities will be preserved and several hundred students returned to their class-rooms."

The resolution is preceded by a series of "whereas" clauses in which the state organization proclaims itself "the staunch defender of the theory that the public schools constitute the very foundation of American democracy" and declares the fact that 600 students are remaining out of school in Allegany county constitutes "a serious threat to our American institutions, as the public school is woven into the very fabric of our conception of government."

Calling attention to the fact that public school authorities have "embarked upon widespread consolidation of public schools, particularly in Allegany county," the resolution said this had "disastrous effects to at least nine separate communities" whose schools were abandoned.

Copies of the resolution were ordered sent to Governor O'Conor, the state board of education and the Allegany county board of education.

The resolution was drafted by a special committee headed by State Senator Robert B. Kimble, Cumberdand, and including John Nesbeth, George McKee, Robert Hutcheson and William Shaffer, all of Cumberland; Owen Price, of Frostburg; and Walted E. Ross of Midland.

It received an unfavorable report from the resolutions committee, it was reported, but the matter was taken to the floor, where, after talks by Kimble, Ross and Taylor, the committee was overruled and the resolution unanimously adopted.

Ross and Taylor also reported they were unable to confer with Dr. Albert S. Cook, state superintendent of schools. Cook told them, they said, that he would not talk with them, but would furnish them a stenographer to whom they could dictate anything they cared to say.

As to the appeal of the citizens committee from the county board's decision on the consolidation progress, Dr. Cook said he would answer it in writing, according to the Midland men.

Their reception at Dr. Cook's office was "cool," Ross and Taylor said, the state school head declaring at one point there had been "too much publicity" about the matter.

Refers to Bridges

Toland cited, too, that Smith had served as United States secretary for the League against War and Fascism. He said Earl Browder, United States Communist chief, described this group, later called the American League for Peace and Democracy, as a "transmission belt for Communism."

He declared a "large number" of the board's legal staff were members of the NLRB employees union, a vertical union affiliated with the American League for Peace and Democracy.

"Our defense program cannot be accomplished as long as this government agency is permitted to champion one element of labor, override the rights of employers and other groups, and maintain and foster radicals," Toland concluded.

mula, it is the unification of all the powers of Italy and Germany for the last round battle against Britain which now is in a decisive stage."

The high command, indicating that its air force was still following an old pattern, reported successful attacks on the Tilbury docks, British shipyards at Chatham; oil tanks at the London Victoria docks, and the firing of several ships, Liverpool port; the Newcastle docks and a series of other objectives of military importance.

Airport Co-ordination Stresses Local Need

CUMBERLANDERS anxious about development of their airport project will be interested in learning that an advisory plan has been drawn up by the Civil Aeronautics Authority, as an aid to states and cities, whereby airport planning is being co-ordinated throughout the country to serve present as well as future needs.

The program, still on its way to completion, contemplates a continuing increase in private flying, mail service and commercial flights, as well as greater airport facilities for national defense. These factors make fitting together of facilities on a country-wide pattern an important problem.

In addition to advising on the placement of new airports, the proposed development programs, made with the aid of state planning agencies in many cases, also take into consideration the improvement and enlargement of existing airports.

To date, plans have been finished for the first three of the seven regions into which the United States is divided for purposes of administering the Civil Aeronautics act. The plans are now being turned back to state planning commissions and other public planning bodies for submission and suggestion to localities.

Included in Region I are the states of Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Machachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire, Maine and the District of Columbia. In Region II are North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee. Region III is made up of Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota and North Dakota.

The Wisconsin state planning board has already adopted an airport development program closely approaching the Authority's proposed plan for the state.

The federal aeronautics agency is making no attempt to solve the airport problems of metropolitan areas. They will be left to city planning bodies to work out in co-ordination with zoning regulations, building and land use restrictions, and highway and street development.

This planning further emphasizes the need for the book up of Cumberland with aviation.

New York Poll Refutes The Publicity "Slump"

REPUBLICANS and the growing number of Democrats and independents who are sympathetic to the Willkie candidacy should not suffer themselves to be taken in by the New Deal propagandists who are ladling out in sly manner the intimation that the Willkie boom is slumping.

As a matter of fact, the Willkie movement continues apace and it is that very thing which is prompting the New Deal propagandist artists to manufacture and exploit an imaginary slump.

The Pathfinder has just concluded and published a straw vote, which is significant in this connection. It is a poll of the borough of Manhattan, New York city. This poll shows Mr. Roosevelt leading in New York city by the narrow margin of 50.4 to 49.6 per cent.

Offhand that might be taken as indicative of a Roosevelt victory in New York. But quite the contrary is disclosed when one takes the time to examine a bit of political history. Four years ago, Mr. Roosevelt took 75.4 per cent of the New York city vote. Hence, the Pathfinder's finding shows he is slipping pretty badly in one of his own strongholds.

In the Dewey-Lehman fight for the governorship in 1938, Dewey got a majority of 597,214 in the rural sections and in cities of less than 100,000. Yet Lehman's majority of 664,720 in New York city and the other larger cities, but chiefly in New York city itself, was sufficient to give him the victory by 67,506. Dewey carried but three of the sixty-two assembly districts in New York city, where the streamlined Democratic machine functioned with amazing efficiency.

Wherefore, in view of the Lehman vote in New York city and the top-heavy majority for Roosevelt there in 1936, it would appear that a virtually even Roosevelt-Willkie split now would mean an overwhelming victory in New York state as a whole for the Willkie ticket. Unless Roosevelt and his New Deal machine can make substantial headway in the big city, he's a goner.

The Boast about Spending Our Money at Home

THE NEW DEAL DOMINION-NEWS, of Morgantown, W. Va., recently indulged in an absurb statement, one which the New Deal propagandists love to spout, to the effect that Mr. Roosevelt has seen to it that our money was spent at home. "It hasn't gone to Europe or South America in exchange for worthless bonds while our own people starved," it added.

No, Roosevelt didn't spend the money for worthless bonds, and neither did he spend it at home. He has bought about twenty billion dollars worth of gold and buried it in holes in the ground. He paid the gold-diggers of Red Russia a profit of $25 an ounce for several billion dollars' worth; he spent hundreds of millions for gold in Mexico, Brazil, Colombia, Canada, the United Kingdom, France; and on every ounce he bought, the gold-digger made a huge profit because Roosevelt had boosted the price. None of those billions was spent at home. Some of them went to finance Red Russia's war on Finland!

But that's only half the story. Other hundreds of millions of dollars have gone to the farmers of South America and Europe to induce them to import their cheaply-raised stuff into the United States to compete with American farmers. During the first seven years of the New Deal, cattle growers in this country have lost $100,000,000 in this way; corn growers have lost $126,237,882; dairymen have lost $130,313,000; meat and poultry packers have lost $219,974,550; and other classes of farmers have lost in proportion.

That's where and how Roosevelt has spent some of the billions of dollars he has extracted from the American taxpayer. Other billions have been spent in boondoggling, for political payrollers and for similar waste and foolishness.

Redskin and Gangster

THE OLD DIME NOVEL is outmoded. The thriller that the male of the last generation knew in his youth is no longer concealed in the hay loft or under the mattress. Deadwood Dick and his colleagues play no part in the sinful education of the younger generation, but their substitutes are causing much alarm in some quarters.

The International Association of Police Chiefs, meeting in Milwaukee, has decided that presentation of crime stories on the radio is detrimental to the morals and proper training of children. And the members took a pledge not to give any more factual information on crimes to the radio.

This question of the effect of radio thrillers on young listeners can be argued until doomsday. Many are inclined to side with Irvin S. Cobb, who once wrote an eloquent defense of the old blood-and-thunder dime novel. According to him the implications of the blood and thunder went right over a child's head. He was delighted by the exploits of the hero, but the sins of the villain and the gory details of the villain's taking off had as little moral effect as an ice cream cone.

If such phrases as "another gangster was rubbed out" are substituted for the old-fashioned "another redskin bit the dust," a surprising similarity is noted between yesterday's forbidden literature and today's crime programs on the radio. The point Mr. Cobb stressed applies to both. It is not the story but the mind which receives it that is important. The adult mind, with its burden of experience, recoils in horror from things which the young mind simply fails to take in.

It is easy to sympathize with the police chiefs who are in a position to know just how unpleasant crime can be. It is only natural, perhaps, that they should be more upset about crime programs on the radio than the average citizen. But they should take a leaf from Mr. Cobb's book and not worry too much—especially when the cop catches the bandit. Youth provides its own insulation for the normal mind.

A Prophet Who Hit The Bull's Eye

SOMETIMES the prophets hit the bull's eye.

For example, as far back as 1937, John T. Flynn, noted economist, wrote three predictions about Roosevelt and his New Deal.

One was that Roosevelt would launch a huge armament program as a means of spending money.

Another was that the president would launch a series of war scares to distract attention from the disintegrating domestic situation.

The third was that Mr. Roosevelt had in mind the shifting of public psychology from the domestic economic motif to the patriotic motif and to build up the slogan: "Stand by the president in 1940."

Whatever the developments and the underlying causes, everybody knows that every one of those predictions has come true.

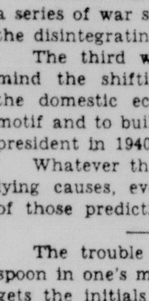

The trouble with being born with a silver spoon in one's mouth is that a fellow often forgets the initials on the spoon are his parents' and not his.

One of the paradoxes of life is that when a fellow grows tall enough to reach the jam jar on the pantry shelf he doesn't care for it anymore.

Once--

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Once I was waiting at some crossroads of war—waiting for a signal that would send men in blue to attack men in field gray. . . . And as we waited in the chill darkness, I heard a bird singing in a tree by a shrine, singing so loud I thought he'd split his little heart for joy. . . . A peasant-soldier whispered to me that it was a nightingale. . . . And I felt ashamed of men and their deeds. His song was so lovely; what we were doing was ugly.

Marshall Maslin

Once I saw a hawk come flying high over a hill. And near that hawk was a tiny speck that was also a bird. . . . A valiant little fellow, circling and pecking and darting away, harassing that great cruel bird, driving him from the heavens of that smaller bird. . . . The little bird won. And I knew that even a man by little repeated deeds of valor may drive the great hawk of fear from his life.

* * *

Once as we drove around a turn in the night, in the western foothills, we suddenly came upon a coyote. . . . For an instant he was full in our headlights—and then he drifted, floated, faded away into the night and was gone. . . . We do not think of the coyote as beautiful, but this one was beautiful, beautiful as anything can be.

Once as I lay lazily in a field, I saw a wasp or perhaps it was a spider, hurrying across the earth. She came to a little mound, I saw her disappear into a hole, saw her reach upward and draw a tiny earthen manhole into place, and was gone. . . . And though I looked and looked I could not find that little trap door—it was so precisely, so cunningly, devised to hide her home from my prying eyes.

* * *

Once we had a dog and he was a friendly fellow, as a rule. . . . But a youngster teased him into anger and our dog attacked and bit. . . . That night a policeman came to shoot our dog. And my tough, brave brother tried to fight the policeman to keep him from killing our dog. . . . The memory of that small kid trying to save his dog still makes me weepy after all these years.

Motor Efficiency A Vital Army Need, Gen. Johnson Says

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

CHICAGO, Sept. 19—In speaking to and talking with the National Association of Motor Bus Operators, I learned something to add to the many things I do not know.

Hugh Johnson

This country is now a gridiron of motor roads. A considerable part of its passenger and freight transportation moves over these roads in automotive vehicles.

Whatever may be the fairness to the railroad networks of the low tax and roadbed costs to these competitors of theirs, this system is a very necessary part of our national machinery for transportation in both peace and war.

Necessity Shown

Hitler has shown the necessity for the highest perfection in swift, motorized movements of army units. Our government has belatedly recognized it. We are getting ready to spend vast sums to motorize our army. Doubtless we will soon be adding to our public highway system a network of "strategic roads"—feeder highways into areas that may be threatened and are not now well equipped for quick transportation of masses of men and supplies.

Our new and only partly motorized army is writing a terrible record of delay and breakdowns due to half-trained drivers and repair and service departments. This is to be expected in any beginning but it should be cured.

Remarkable Performance

The record of experienced civilian bus and truck systems economy efficiency and maintenance shows remarkable performance—averages of 75,000 to 100,000 miles of highway operation without mechanical delay. Recently, a motorized artillery battalion on a super-highway averaged sixteen miles per hour on a march of 135 miles—due to mechanical troubles. This is just one of dozens of recent examples. You can't make an efficient motor fleet overnight.

Our plans for a new swift-moving motorized army capable of striking like lightning anywhere on either coast of our country, should be integrated closely with our splendid existing civilian system of motor transport. It would be foolish to attempt to parallel it completely for the army with another complete system of government owned and operated motor vehicles.

General Marshall made clear recently that his plans do not contemplate a military motor fleet capable of carrying all his troops at one time. He suggested a "shuttle system" whereby the army motor transport is to take part of an army forward and then go back for the rest.

For Service as Well

If it only took half on a trip that would cut army speed by two-thirds. Why should there not be added to that plan, wherever possible, complete utilization in both peace and war of our splendid existing civilian motor transport system—not merely for carriage, but for maintenance of service? To do that requires experimental experience. While in an emergency all such transport would surely be suddenly commandeered and used in helter-skelter fashion, it is as important to get a smoothly working operation by peacetime practice as it is to have experimental maneuvers with the national guard.

Is anything like that being done? On the contrary, because the quartermaster general of the army has a "joint military passenger agreement" with the railroads which is practically exclusive of the use of automotive transport, it is only in very rare cases that the civilian automotive systems can be used for the transportation of troops.

Old Stuff

One reason advanced by the quartermaster general for refusal to change that bone-headed senility, is that the "joint military passenger agreements have been in effect between the railroads and the War and Navy departments for over a quarter of a century."

So had the French military methods which the German swift moving motorized attack smashed in a few weeks, been used for over a "quarter of a century." This reason reveals the typcial dry rot of the crustacean bureaucracy which is so dangerous in this swiftly moving world.

We must have our railroad network for military efficiency and you can't keep it up without giving it business But we also need our automotive network and we can't reconcile that with a railroad monopoly. Something ought to be done about this tomorrow. — Distributed by United Features Syndicate, Inc.

OUR HOME GROWN "APPEASEMENT" POLICY

Movement to One-Man Government Needs More Attention, Sullivan Says

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—The issue which Mr. Willkie is now emphasizing goes by two names. Both are unfortunate. "Totalitarian" is, to the man in the street—and also to some radio speakers, I observe—difficult to pronounce. It is also, to Americans, vague in its implications.

Mark Sullivan

The other word, "dictator" is stale. It has been used so often that it no longer arrests attention. Also, when the word is applied to President Roosevelt, it implies more than is, at the present stage, just. Those who use the word, if they are thoughtful, feel they must qualify it. They feel they must explain that in America, so far, the word means in part a tendency, a direction. It is not solely or even primarily a concrete objective consciously intended by Mr. Roosevelt. The necessity of this qualification was felt by Mr. Willkie in his Coffeyville speech. He said:

"Let me make myself clear. I say nothing about the personal motives of Mr. Roosevelt. He is a man educated and reared in American traditions. He may not want dictatorship. But in his hands our traditions are not safe. He has lost his grip on our American principles. He gives lip service to them but he does not know how to preserve them. He has put our democratic system in danger of its life."

Just, but Inadequate

That is fair. That is just. But, for the purpose of waking America up, that is tragically inadequate. The movement toward the totalitarian form of society in America, and the one-man type of government which alone can administer totalitarian society—that movement is so strong, so insidiously expanding its area, and so certain to attain its objective unless it is arrested, that it would justify warning as shrill and urgent as the sirens which warn of air raids over London.

So much of the force of this movement lies in the sum of its parts, that merely to point out and concretely describe any one part, fails to convince. That condition, that fear of failing to convince, has discouraged many a voice which wished to cry out. To warn, but warn ineffectively—so some felt who realized the danger—would merely dull the people's ears.

Alarmed in 1937

Yet there was a time when the people sensed the danger, and acted. In the summer and fall of 1937, the accumulation of several steps by the administration—including the court measure; and the tolerance, even the encouragement, of the sit-down strike; and the attempt of the president to "purge" Democratic Senators who resisted the totalitarian movement—the sum of these alarmed the voters. The primaries and elections of 1937 returned to office every senator whom Mr. Roosevelt had attempted to ban. Those elections sent to the House an immense addition to the number of Republican and conservative Democratic members. So much so that the House which met in January 1938 regarded itself as having a mandate from the people to trim down the excesses of the New Deal.

This the House proceeded to do—in the spirit, not of destroying the New Deal, but merely checking it; in the spirit of preserving so much of the New Deal as was consistent with the principles and traditions of American government, and cutting away that part which led toward totalitarian government. Much of this was done. More was initiated. One of the most comprehensive checks was the Walter-Logan bill.

Ancient Rights Curtailed

The New Deal, in its early years when it had little restraint, had gathered to itself immense powers to harass the individual citizen. Through cunningly written statutes, not understood by the Congresses that hurriedly passed them; through broad powers exercised under those statutes by New Deal agencies, and through complacent decisions by New Deal judges who were constantly filtering into the courts—through the aggregate of these, some of the most ancient rights of the citizen had been curtailed.

To check this, to protect the citizen against arbitrary power exercised by agents of government, to insure to every citizen the right of appeal to a judicial body—to accomplish this a measure was written by Senator Logan of Kentucky and Representative Walter of Pennsylvania. Senator Logan, a Democrat loyal to the administration, described the purpose of his measure as

"To stem and if possible to reverse the drift . . . which, if it should succeed in any substantial degree in this country, could but result in totalitarianism."

Sentiment Reflected

That measure, in April of this year, passed the House by 279 to ninety-seven, practically three to one. Of the Democrats in the House, more than half voted for it. This reflected not only strong conviction on the part of the House about principles of government. It reflected also belief by the House that it was, in turn, reflecting the sentiment of the country. For at the time the House acted, practically every member was about to go before his constituents for renomination.

That was America last April—in full tide of trimming the New Deal down to the proportions of normal reforms, within the frame of the constitution. Then, in early May, came the impact of war upon us, in the form of the German advance into France. At once our program of domestic measures was suspended. The Walter-Logan measure has never been brought up in the Senate, and is now not likely to be, during the present session. Congress turned to the war, to defense measures. In enacting these, Congress necessarily gives to the president, for the purpose of defense, powers far greater than those which Congress, a few months before, felt to be too much.

Promise and Performance

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

To what extent has Mr. Roosevelt discharged the golden promises of 1932?

Have the idle been reemployed?

Has recovery been achieved?

Employment averages for 1939 show that there still were approximately 10,000,000 workers without employment in private callings.

According to League of Nations records, the United States ranked fourteenth in 1936 among 18 leading nations in degree of recovery from the world-wide depression, with 1929 as the level of industrial production. By June, 1939, the United States had dropped to seventeenth place—next to the bottom.

In 1936, the United States stood fourteenth among these 18 nations in reemployment. By June, 1936, it had fallen back to sixteenth place.

In June, 1936, wholesale commodity prices in the United States were seventeen per cent below the 1929 level, and this country ranked seventh. In June, 1939, the commodity index here stood twenty-one per cent below the 1929 level, and we were twelfth in standing.

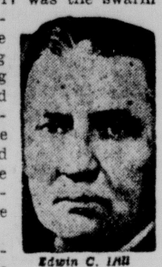

Since then, the war has thrown all comparisons out of focus, and what recovery there has been in the United States during 1940 has been due solely to the stimulus of defense construction.

Is this the sort of record that qualifies Mr. Roosevelt for a third term?

War Crooks Are At Old Game and Warning Is Given

By EDWIN C. HILL

One of the most depressing aspects of our brave and spirited war efforts of 1917 was the swarm of crooks everywhere. They were sniffing, snouting and snatching whenever and wherever patriotic citizens were pooling work and resources in the national endeavor. Here they are again.

Edwin C. Hill

The Better Business Bureau, the SEC and all fraud-fighting agencies find them moving in with fake securities, spuriously linked with the defense program, shoving stock in mythical weapons, materials or inventions for which Uncle Sam is supposed to be eager to dish out billions. They capitalize cupidity, but they also capitalize the gullibility of the man who wants to believe and who, in his patriotic fervor, lest his guard down.

There's no billboard high enough on which to emblazon a warning against these same old bloodsuckers, whose peacetime killings are traditionally in boiler-factories, bucket-shops and blue-sky skulduggery.

Memory Still Vivid

The memory of "we boys" during the first World war is still vivid and, for our own good, always should be. We were perhaps naive then, we are now as regards saving the world for democracy and still more naive when it came to the quick, smooth touch. Subways, theatre lobbies, ball parks and crowded street corners were over-run with benevolent looking male moochers and female, too, gathering funds for this or that real or imaginary soldier outfit or hospital, or money for medical supplies, books, recreation, tobacco, musical instruments and heaven knows what for our fighting forces. They had us going, for a while. You were a pretty cheap skate if you didn't shell out for the lads at the front.

Undoubtedly many millions were sluiced into the pockets of the crooks who worked all the big cities of the country, with never a dime ever finding its way to the soldier boys.

Various Rackets

One slick racket was a memorial book, which was to enhrine you and your family in the historic record of unselfish war effort. Sometimes the take was as high as a thousand dollars a page—and the book was never printed.

Large-scale gleanings were in fake benefits, some of them outright swindles, and others in the twilight zone of chicanery where most of the money was scalped by press agents, caterers and various intermediaries between the sucker and the worthy cause, the latter getting just enough of the loot to keep the promoter out of jail.

These fakes were innocently sponsored by men and women of high social standing, or of eminence in the business community. Even when the benefit was genuine, under honest management, there was an appalling overhead, and no matter how alert the management was, there were always some rats nibbling at the proceeds. As we have noted, it was a depressing story.

Always Out of Reach

In putting down the specific instance, I regret that I will have to withhold the name of the crook. The newspaper boys had enough evidence to tag him for thirty years in the Bastile, but, mysteriously wired in somewhere, he was always just out of reach of the constables. He was supposed to be a Count, of British-French extraction who had married an American girl and taken American citizenship. He was a foppish little man, with moustache ends waxed to a needle-point, an impeccable morning suit, rare Malacca sticks, a quaint foreign accent and always with a cape jasmine in his buttonhole.

He had the society crowd gasping with worshipful admiration. He began to throw big benefits for the soldiers. Society matrons used to weep when they heard his impassioned appeals for "our boys" and strain their check books to the limit.

From Home Town

One day a roustabout leg-man reporter, with a four-dollar hat and no cape jasmine, recognized in this ornate little dude none other than the son of the hardware dealer in his own little Ohio town—a lad who had been taken into custody for small pilfering and had sought larger and greener pastures. He said as much. The phoney count snorted and hissed with anger but put on a quick disappearing act. It was then dislosed that his fake benefits had been overhauled and that the John Laws had been sidetracked by mysterious influence.

All signs are that we are moving into another 1917. Gabriel's loudspeaker wouldn't be too much of a blast to warn us against the same old crooks, working the same old gags.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Airport Co-ordination Stresses Local Need

CUMBERLANDERS anxious about development of their airport project will be interested in learning that an advisory plan has been drawn up by the Civil Aeronautics Authority, as an aid to states and cities, whereby airport planning is being co-ordinated throughout the country to serve present as well as future needs.

The program, still on its way to completion, contemplates a continuing increase in private flying, mail service and commercial flights, as well as greater airport facilities for national defense. These factors make fitting together of facilities on a country-wide pattern an important problem.

In addition to advising on the placement of new airports, the proposed development programs, made with the aid of state planning agencies in many cases, also take into consideration the improvement and enlargement of existing airports.

To date, plans have been finished for the first three of the seven regions into which the United States is divided for purposes of administering the Civil Aeronautics act. The plans are now being turned back to state planning commissions and other public planning bodies for submission and suggestion to localities.

Included in Region I are the states of Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Machachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire, Maine and the District of Columbia. In Region II are North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee. Region III is made up of Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota and North Dakota.

The Wisconsin state planning board has already adopted an airport development program closely approaching the Authority's proposed plan for the state.

The federal aeronautics agency is making no attempt to solve the airport problems of metropolitan areas. They will be left to city planning bodies to work out in co-ordination with zoning regulations, building and land use restrictions, and highway and street development.

This planning further emphasizes the need for the hook up of Cumberland with aviation.

New York Poll Refutes The Publicity "Slump"

REPUBLICANS and the growing number of Democrats and independents who are sympathetic to the Willkie candidacy should not suffer themselves to be taken in by the New Deal propagandists who are ladling out in sly manner the intimation that the Willkie boom is slumping.

As a matter of fact, the Willkie movement continues apace and it is that very thing which is prompting the New Deal propagandist artists to manufacture and exploit an imaginary slump.

The Pathfinder has just concluded and published a straw vote, which is significant in this connection. It is a poll of the borough of Manhattan, New York city. This poll shows Mr. Roosevelt leading in New York city by the narrow margin of 50.4 to 49.6 per cent.

Offhand that might be taken as indicative of a Roosevelt victory in New York. But quite the contrary is disclosed when one takes the time to examine a bit of political history. Four years ago, Mr. Roosevelt took 75.4 per cent of the New York city vote. Hence, the Pathfinder's finding shows he is slipping pretty badly in one of his own strongholds.

In the Dewey-Lehman fight for the governorship in 1938, Dewey got a majority of 597,214 in the rural sections and in cities of less than 100,000. Yet Lehman's majority of 664,720 in New York city and the other larger cities, but chiefly in New York city itself, was sufficient to give him the victory by 67,506. Dewey carried but three of the sixty-two assembly districts in New York city, where the streamlined Democratic machine functioned with amazing efficiency.

Wherefore, in view of the Lehman vote in New York city and the top-heavy majority for Roosevelt there in 1936, it would appear that a virtually even Roosevelt-Willkie split now would mean an overwhelming victory in New York state as a whole for the Willkie ticket. Unless Roosevelt and his New Deal machine can make substantial headway in the big city, he's a goner.

The Boast about Spending Our Money at Home

THE NEW DEAL DOMINION-NEWS, of Morgantown, W. Va., recently indulged in an absurb statement, one which the New Deal propagandists love to spout, to the effect that Mr. Roosevelt has seen to it that our money was spent at home. "It hasn't gone to Europe or South America in exchange for worthless bonds while our own people starved," it added.

No, Roosevelt didn't spend the money for worthless bonds, and neither did he spend it at home. He has bought about twenty billion dollars worth of gold and buried it in holes in the ground. He paid the gold-diggers of Red Russia a profit of $25 an ounce for several billion dollars' worth; he spent hundreds of millions for gold in Mexico, Brazil, Colombia, Canada, the United Kingdom, France; and on every ounce he bought, the gold-digger made a huge profit because Roosevelt had boosted the price. None of those billions was spent at home. Some of them went to finance Red Russia's war on Finland!

But that's only half the story. Other hundreds of millions of dollars have gone to the farmers of South America and Europe to induce them to import their cheaply-raised stuff into the United States to compete with American farmers. During the first seven years of the New Deal, cattle growers in this country have lost $100,000,000 in this way; corn growers have lost $126,237,882; dairymen have lost $130,313,000; meat and poultry packers have lost $219,974,550; and other classes of farmers have lost in proportion.

That's where and how Roosevelt has spent some of the billions of dollars he has extracted from the American taxpayer. Other billions have been spent in boondoggling, for political payrollers and for similar waste and foolishness.

Redskin and Gangster

THE OLD DIME NOVEL is outmoded. The thriller that the male of the last generation knew in his youth is no longer concealed in the hay loft or under the mattress. Deadwood Dick and his colleagues play no part in the sinful education of the younger generation, but their substitutes are causing much alarm in some quarters.

The International Association of Police Chiefs, meeting in Milwaukee, has decided that presentation of crime stories on the radio is detrimental to the morals and proper training of children. And the members took a pledge not to give any more factual information on crimes to the radio.

This question of the effect of radio thrillers on young listeners can be argued until doomsday. Many are inclined to side with Irvin S. Cobb, who once wrote an eloquent defense of the old blood-and-thunder dime novel. According to him the implications of the blood and thunder went right over a child's head. He was delighted by the exploits of the hero, but the sins of the villain and the gory details of the villain's taking off had as little moral effect as an ice cream cone.

If such phrases as "another gangster was rubbed out" are substituted for the old-fashioned "another redskin bit the dust," a surprising similarity is noted between yesterday's forbidden literature and today's crime programs on the radio. The point Mr. Cobb stressed applies to both. It is not the story but the mind which receives it that is important. The adult mind, with its burden of experience, recoils in horror from things which the young mind simply fails to take in.

It is easy to sympathize with the police chiefs who are in a position to know just how unpleasant crime can be. It is only natural, perhaps, that they should be more upset about crime programs on the radio than the average citizen. But they should take a leaf from Mr. Cobb's book and not worry too much—especially when the cop catches the bandit. Youth provides its own insulation for the normal mind.

A Prophet Who Hit The Bull's Eye

SOMETIMES the prophets hit the bull's eye.

For example, as far back as 1937, John T. Flynn, noted economist, wrote three predictions about Roosevelt and his New Deal.

One was that Roosevelt would launch a huge armament program as a means of spending money.

Another was that the president would launch a series of war scares to distract attention from the disintegrating domestic situation.

The third was that Mr. Roosevelt had in mind the shifting of public psychology from the domestic economic motif to the patriotic motif and to build up the slogan: "Stand by the president in 1940."

Whatever the developments and the underlying causes, everybody knows that every one of those predictions has come true.

The trouble with being born with a silver spoon in one's mouth is that a fellow often forgets the initials on the spoon are his parents' and not his.

One of the paradoxes of life is that when a fellow grows tall enough to reach the jam jar on the pantry shelf he doesn't care for it anymore.

Once--

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Once I was waiting at some crossroads of war—waiting for a signal that would send men in blue to attack men in field gray. . . . And as we waited in the chill darkness, I heard a bird singing in a tree by a shrine, singing so loud I thought he'd split his little heart for joy. . . . A peasant-soldier whispered to me that it was a nightingale. . . . And I felt ashamed of men and their deeds. His song was so lovely; what we were doing was ugly.

Once I saw a hawk come flying high over a hill. And near that hawk was a tiny speck that was also a bird. . . . A valiant little fellow, circling and pecking and darting away, harassing that great cruel bird, driving him from the heavens of that smaller bird. . . . The little bird won. And I knew that even a man by little repeated deeds of valor may drive the great hawk of fear from his life.

* * *

Once as we drove around a turn in the night, in the western foothills, we suddenly came upon a coyote. . . . For an instant he was full in our headlights—and then he drifted, floated, faded away into the night and was gone. . . . We do not think of the coyote as beautiful, but this one was beautiful, beautiful as anything can be.

Once as I lay lazily in a field, I saw a wasp or perhaps it was a spider, hurrying across the earth. She came to a little mound, I saw her disappear into a hole, saw her reach upward and draw a tiny earthen manhole into place, and was gone. . . . And though I looked and looked I could not find that little trap door—it was so precisely, so cunningly, devised to hide her home from my prying eyes.

* * *

Once we had a dog and he was a friendly fellow, as a rule. . . . But a youngster teased him into anger and our dog attacked and bit. . . . That night a policeman came to shoot our dog. And my tough, brave brother tried to fight the policeman to keep him from killing our dog. . . . The memory of that small kid trying to save his dog still makes me weepy after all these years.

Motor Efficiency A Vital Army Need, Gen. Johnson Says

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh Johnson

CHICAGO, Sept. 19—In speaking to and talking with the National Association of Motor Bus Operators, I learned something to add to the many things I do not know.

This country is now a gridiron of motor roads. A considerable part of its passenger and freight transportation moves over these roads in automotive vehicles.

Whatever may be the fairness to the railroad networks of the low tax and roadbed costs to these competitors of theirs, this system is a very necessary part of our national machinery for transportation in both peace and war.

Necessity Shown

Hitler has shown the necessity for the highest perfection in swift, motorized movements of army units. Our government has belatedly recognized it. We are getting ready to spend vast sums to motorize our army. Doubtless we will soon be adding to our public highway system a network of "strategic roads"—feeder highways into areas that may be threatened and are not now well equipped for quick transportation of masses of men and supplies.

Our new and only partly motorized army is writing a terrible record of delay and breakdowns due to half-trained drivers and repair and service departments. This is to be expected in any beginning but it should be cured.

Remarkable Performance

The record of experienced civilian bus and truck systems economy efficiency and maintenance shows remarkable performance—averages of 75,000 to 100,000 miles of highway operation without mechanical delay. Recently, a motorized artillery battalion on a super-highway averaged sixteen miles per hour on a march of 135 miles—due to mechanical troubles. This is just one of dozens of recent examples. You can't make an efficient motor fleet overnight.

Our plans for a new swift-moving motorized army capable of striking like lightning anywhere on either coast of our country, should be integrated closely with our splendid existing civilian system of motor transport. It would be foolish to attempt to parallel it completely for the army with another complete system of government owned and operated motor vehicles.

General Marshall made clear recently that his plans do not contemplate a military motor fleet capable of carrying all his troops at one time. He suggested a "shuttle system" whereby the army motor transport is to take part of an army forward and then go back for the rest.

For Service as Well

If it only took half on a trip that would cut army speed by two-thirds. Why should there not be added to that plan, wherever possible, complete utilization in both peace and war of our splendid existing civilian motor transport system—not merely for carriage, but for maintenance of service? To do that requires experimental experience. While in an emergency all such transport would surely be suddenly commandeered and used in helter-skelter fashion, it is as important to get a smoothly working operation by peacetime practice as it is to have experimental maneuvers with the national guard.

Is anything like that being done? On the contrary, because the quartermaster general of the army has a "joint military passenger agreement" with the railroads which is practically exclusive of the use of automotive transport, it is only in very rare cases that the civilian automotive systems can be used for the transportation of troops.

Old Stuff

One reason advanced by the quartermaster general for refusal to change that bone-headed senility, is that the "joint military passenger agreements have been in effect between the railroads and the War and Navy departments for over a quarter of a century."

So had the French military methods which the German swift moving motorized attack smashed in a few weeks, been used for over a "quarter of a century." This reason reveals the typcial dry rot of the crustacean bureaucracy which is so dangerous in this swiftly moving world.

We must have our railroad network for military efficiency and you can't keep it up without giving it business But we also need our automotive network and we can't reconcile that with a railroad monopoly. Something ought to be done about this tomorrow. — Distributed by United Features Syndicate, Inc.

OUR HOME GROWN "APPEASEMENT" POLICY

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—The issue which Mr. Willkie is now emphasizing goes by two names. Both are unfortunate. "Totalitarian" is, to the man in the street—and also to some radio speakers, I observe—difficult to pronounce. It is also, to Americans, vague in its implications.

Mark Sullivan

The other word, "dictator" is stale. It has been used so often that it no longer arrests attention. Also, when the word is applied to President Roosevelt, it implies more than is, at the present stage, just. Those who use the word, if they are thoughtful, feel they must qualify it. They feel they must explain that in America, so far, the word means in part a tendency, a direction. It is not solely or even primarily a concrete objective consciously intended by Mr. Roosevelt. The necessity of this qualification was felt by Mr. Willkie in his Coffeyville speech. He said:

"Let me make myself clear. I say nothing about the personal motives of Mr. Roosevelt. He is a man educated and reared in American traditions. He may not want dictatorship. But in his hands our traditions are not safe. He has lost his grip on our American principles. He gives lip service to them but he does not know how to preserve them. He has put our democratic system in danger of its life."

Just, but Inadequate

That is fair. That is just. But, for the purpose of waking America up, that is tragically inadequate. The movement toward the totalitarian form of society in America, and the one-man type of government which alone can administer totalitarian society—that movement is so strong, so insidiously expanding its area, and so certain to attain its objective unless it is arrested, that it would justify warning as shrill and urgent as the sirens which warn of air raids over London.

So much of the force of this movement lies in the sum of its parts, that merely to point out and concretely describe any one part, fails to convince. That condition, that fear of failing to convince, has discouraged many a voice which wished to cry out. To warn, but warn ineffectively—so some felt who realized the danger—would merely dull the people's ears.

Yet there was a time when the people sensed the danger, and acted. In the summer and fall of 1937, the accumulation of several steps by the administration—including the court measure; and the tolerance, even the encouragement, of the sit-down strike; and the attempt of the president to "purge" Democratic Senators who resisted the totalitarian movement—the sum of these alarmed the voters. The primaries and elections of 1937 returned to office every senator whom Mr. Roosevelt had attempted to ban. Those elections sent to the House an immense addition to the number of Republican and conservative Democratic members. So much so that the House which met in January 1938 regarded itself as having a mandate from the people to trim down the excesses of the New Deal.

This the House proceeded to do—in the spirit, not of destroying the New Deal, but merely checking it; in the spirit of preserving so much of the New Deal as was consistent with the principles and traditions of American government, and cutting away that part which led toward totalitarian government. Much of this was done. More was initiated. One of the most comprehensive checks was the Walter-Logan bill.

Ancient Rights Curtailed

The New Deal, in its early years when it had little restraint, had gathered to itself immense powers to harass the individual citizen. Through cunningly written statutes, not understood by the Congresses that hurriedly passed them; through broad powers exercised under those statutes by New Deal agencies, and through complacent decisions by New Deal judges who were constantly filtering into the courts—through the aggregate of these, some of the most ancient rights of the citizen had been curtailed.

To check this, to protect the citizen against arbitrary power exercised by agents of government, to insure to every citizen the right of appeal to a judicial body—to accomplish this a measure was written by Senator Logan of Kentucky and Representative Walter of Pennsylvania. Senator Logan, a Democrat loyal to the administration, described the purpose of his measure as

> "To stem and if possible to reverse the drift . . . which, if it should succeed in any substantial degree in this country, could but result in totalitarianism."

Sentiment Reflected

That measure, in April of this year, passed the House by 279 to ninety-seven, practically three to one. Of the Democrats in the House, more than half voted for it. This reflected not only strong conviction on the part of the House about principles of government. It reflected also belief by the House that it was, in turn, reflecting the sentiment of the country. For at the time the House acted, practically every member was about to go before his constituents for renomination.

That was America last April—in full tide of trimming the New Deal down to the proportions of normal reforms, within the frame of the constitution. Then, in early May, came the impact of war upon us, in the form of the German advance into France. At once our program of domestic measures was suspended. The Walter-Logan measure has never been brought up in the Senate, and is now not likely to be, during the present session. Congress turned to the war, to defense measures. In enacting these, Congress necessarily gives to the president, for the purpose of defense, powers far greater than those which Congress, a few months before, felt to be too much.

They had us going, for a while. You were a pretty cheap skate if you didn't shell out for the lads at the front.

Undoubtedly many millions were sluiced into the pockets of the crooks who worked all the big cities of the country, with never a dime ever finding its way to the soldier boys.

Various Rackets

One slick racket was a memorial book, which was to enhrine you and your family in the historic record of unselfish war effort. Sometimes the take was as high as a thousand dollars a page—and the book was never printed.

Large-scale gleanings were in fake benefits, some of them outright swindles, and others in the twilight zone of chicanery where most of the money was scalped by press agents, caterers and various intermediaries between the sucker and the worthy cause, the latter getting just enough of the loot to keep the promoter out of jail.

These fakes were innocently sponsored by men and women of high social standing, or of eminence in the business community. Even when the benefit was genuine, under honest management, there was an appalling overhead, and no matter how alert the management was, there were always some rats nibbling at the proceeds. As we have noted, it was a depressing story.

Always Out of Reach

In putting down the specific instance, I regret that I will have to withhold the name of the crook. The newspaper boys had enough evidence to tag him for thirty years in the Bastile, but, mysteriously wired in somewhere, he was always just out of reach of the constables. He was supposed to be a Count, of British-French extraction who had married an American girl and taken American citizenship. He was a foppish little man, with moustache ends waxed to a needle-point, an impeccable morning suit, rare Malacca sticks, a quaint foreign accent and always with a cape jasmine in his buttonhole.

He had the society crowd gasping with worshipful admiration. He began to throw big benefits for the soldiers. Society matrons used to weep when they heard his impassioned appeals for "our boys" and strain their check books to the limit.

From Home Town

One day a roustabout leg-man reporter, with a four-dollar hat and no cape jasmine, recognized in this ornate little dude none other than the son of the hardware dealer in his own little Ohio town—a lad who had been taken into custody for small pilfering and had sought larger and greener pastures. He said as much. The phoney count snorted and hissed with anger but put on a quick disappearing act. It was then dislosed that his fake benefits had been overhauled and that the John Laws had been sidetracked by mysterious influence.

All signs are that we are moving into another 1917. Gabriel's loudspeaker wouldn't be too much of a blast to warn us against the same old crooks, working the same old gags.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Cumberland Civic Club Opens Fall Season with Interesting Meeting

The Cumberland Civic Club opened its first fall meeting with a full attendance yesterday at the Centre Street Methodist church recreational hall. At the opening of the meeting luncheon was served at a tastefully appointed table.

The usual business meeting followed the luncheon with the president, Mrs. J. W. Holmes, presiding. Mrs. Holmes inspired the members in their work by comparing the club with a tapestry. She stated, "that the officers of the club were the frame work and that each member in her work was the pattern.

Poems Are Read

Mrs. Harry Simpson read three poems and Mrs. Nellie Wilson Footer reported on the Travelers Aid. Of unusual interest on the program was a style show presented by Rosenbaum brothers with the following as models: Mrs. Lee Cahill, Mrs. R. C. Roberts, Mrs. W. J. Cramer, Sr., Mrs. Webster R. Edwards, Miss Ann Corrigan, Mrs. Joseph Russig, Mrs. Albert Hast and Mrs. Robert Wilkinson. They displayed sizes from fourteen to forty-four.

The show was cleverly defined and displayed. The woman of the present day was compared with Venus De Milo, the famous beauty, who has gone down in history and who will always be remembered for her charm. It was said that all women now days have not the figure of Venus, but now clothes are so charming and do so much for you that all women can at all times be attractive. They should also resign themselves to dressing like adults, for the little-girl, full-skirted dresses are definitely out. Skirts in the new fashions are not skin tight, but gently flared. The fashion states that smooth moss-like crepes or sheer woolens are favored fabrics for the first fall dresses, and in addition to the proverbial black with brown, there is a new shade of plum which blends beautifully with brown and gray and black.

Also popular are the bolero type dresses and dress coats which create slimness. Off-face hats are also at the height of style as are side-swept berets to flatter in silhouette and narrow brims to give balance.

Gloves will not be important in color, but in design and bags in smart tailored cowhide, alligator and calf will be "good", but for dress suede, broadcloth and calf will be excellent. More use of stitching, acings and drapings, continued use of jewel and metal trims with a light hand.

It was explained that jewelry takes an important stand, a pin clip worn with earrings or bracelets is very smart. This season shows that Persian trend in jewelry, as well as Lillian Russell in crystal and gold. The old-fashioned fob-locket is being shown in daytime wear. Pearl necklaces and jet ropes used for casual wear and tortoise shell and amber will be excellent for evening.

There's Beauty In That Barren Old Gymnasium

You'll probably be a better-looking girl after you go to college. Today's college curriculum is out to do what it can—and has proved it can do a lot—for your face 'n' figure as well as for your mind.

Medical exams are as important as entrance exams in many schools—as important to you as to the school.

When the medical and the physical education staffs look you over, they'll okay your strong points and show up your weak ones.

Then it's up to you to take advantage of what the college has to offer in correcting the weaknesses.

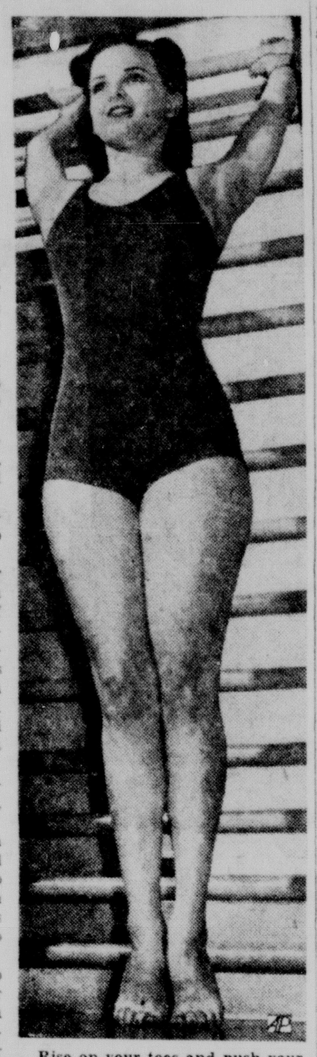

It took the college to discover the great posture faults of American girls—the appalling prevalence of swayback, round shoulders, knock-knees and bow legs. And the colleges probably have the best methods to help you correct these faults in their posture and corrective courses.

Some schools insist that every girl participate in a posture class for at least a few weeks.

Sometimes girls enter with posture bad enough to get a grade of F, and come out with an A.

There's good advice available from college doctors about sleep, food and exercise. You may be surprised to find an instructor who will teach you how to relax. Such courses have spread swiftly from campus to campus recently.

You can get back-stage makeup lessons helping produce a play, or in personality classes. You'll learn how to apply makeup that will emphasize your best features rather than merely hide your faults. You'll get on to the tricks that will make you a well-groomed American woman.

Rise on your toes and push your body forward until it forms an arc. Keep the stomach flat. This controls waistline and diaphragm.

There's Beauty In That Barren Old Gymnasium

By BETTY CLARKE
AP Feature Service Writer

You'll probably be a better-looking girl after you go to college. Today's college curriculum is out to do what it can—and has proved it can do a lot—for your face 'n' figure as well as for your mind.

Medical exams are as important as entrance exams in many schools—as important to you as to the school.

When the medical and the physical education staffs look you over, they'll okay your strong points and snow up your weak ones.

Then it's up to you to take advantage of what the college has to offer in correcting the weaknesses.

It took the college to discover the great posture faults of American girls—the appalling prevalence of swayback, round shoulders, knock-knees and bow legs. And the colleges probably have the best methods to help you correct these faults in their posture and corrective courses.

Some schools insist that every girl participate in a posture class for at least a few weeks.

Sometimes girls enter with posture bad enough to get a grade of F, and come out with an A.

There's good advice available from college doctors about sleep, food and exercise. You may be surprised to find an instructor who will teach you how to relax. Such courses have spread swiftly from campus to campus recently.

You can get back-stage makeup lessons helping produce a play, or in personality classes. You'll learn how to apply makeup that will emphasize your best features rather than merely hide your faults. You'll get on to the tricks that will make you a well-groomed American woman.

Rise on your toes and push your body forward until it forms an arc. Keep the stomach flat. This controls waistline and diaphragm.

Causes and Cures For Deafness Are Discussed

Improvement In Handling Certain Cases Is Reported

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The commonest form of deafness which occurs in middle age is due to a hardening and fixation of the joint surfaces between the little bones in the middle ear. These bones in health form a readily movable hinge attached on the one side of the ear drum and on the other side of the middle ear to the window of the organ of hearing. When the ear drum vibrates in response to sounds, these bones transmit the finest variation of the vibration to the organ of hearing where the nerve ending of the auditory nerve pick them up and transform them into sound sensations. Obviously if these bones become fixed so that free play of movement is not allowed the hearing will get progressively worse.

New Improvement

This form of deafness is not well understood and has hitherto baffled attempts to complete cure. But of late more improvement in handling these cases is evident. Last year we reported on the operation by a New York otologist which consists of removing the adhesions and bony fixation of the middle ear bones. Within the year I have been priveged to examine a number of patients who had the operation of making an artificial Eustachian tube—an opening into the middle ear which admits air pressure and allows the bones to move freely. These operations have been quite successful.

It has been suggested that nutritional deficiency may contribute to the condition. This idea has been advanced by Dr. Grant Selfridge, of San Francisco. And it requires only a little thought to see that the idea is not far-fetched.

We consider arthritis to be due to infection, nutritional and constitutional factors. The changes in the bones of the middle ear are not so very different from the changes of arthritis—a roughening and fixation of the joint surfaces, a change in the consistency of the temporal bone.

Surrounding Infections

Infection of the nose and throat has long been held to be associated with chronic progressive deafness. Such infections would not occur if the soil were not properly prepared. A deficiency of Vitamins A and D appears quite definitely to lower resistance to infection.

Patients with this condition appear to be in good constitutional health, but valuable information can be gleaned if inquiry is made into their dietary history, which indicates that all is not as well as would appear on the surface. Not only Vitamins A and D are found to be lacking, but Vitamin B, which has such an influence on the nerve fibers. Gray considered the auditory nerve involvement as primary in these cases and the bony changes as secondary.

In actual practice patients with high tone loss were found to respond favororably to feeding of concentrated Vitamins A, B, C, and D. The concentrated B complex made from California rice-bran was used in these studies. In early vitamin concentrates did much to restore most of the hearing.

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE OTHER MAN'S GAME

IN WARFARE, in the boxing ring, or any other kind of contest, it is an accepted rule of winning tactics to refuse to "play the other man's game." If Gene Tunney had tried to slug with Dempsey instead of out-boxing him, he would have been committing this greatest mistake a pugilist can make. It would have been no worse, however, than the pitiful efforts of some players to outguess a shrewd psychic bidder. The best way to deal with such fellows, unless you are a deep student of psychics yourself, is to try to tell your partner the exact truth about your hand, as closely as possible, in order to show up the psycher.

(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

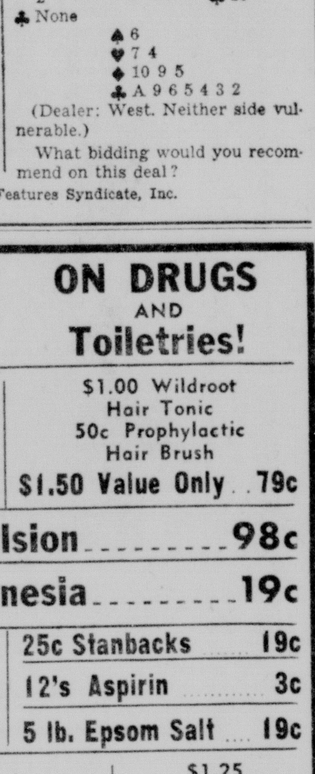

North in this rubber game knew West as an inveterate psychic addict, and a shrewd one. He had "fixed" poor North so often that the latter decided now was the time to get even with him. So he made a "trap pass," hoping to see his opponents get into a peck of trouble. East could not be censured especially for his pass, even with that six-card suit, when he had three clubs and was so devoid of useful honors.

South's pass was the blow. Obviously, he should have bid 1-Diamond, in order to protect a possible sizeable pass by his partner. But he reckoned his hand was barely about average in strength and feared stirring up East and West into finding a major suit fit, probably in spades.

The play was a joke. North ran all of his clubs and his two high hearts, then led a diamond to South, who took the rest of the tricks. For the laydown grand slam, made defensively, the side got only 350 points, whereas over 2,000 were in the cards. If North had doubled, the small slam at least would have been reached.

IN ITS very beginning, under the late Samuel E. Kline in 1901, it was and is a store operated in the interest of the customer and the community — with a fair one price for everybody, a fair profit to the merchant, and open dealings in every direction.

BUT IT is not only in this that we have to be different. Located, as we are, in a very convenient place but not in the midst of the shopping district we, frankly, have to keep "a little ahead of the next"—and, we do just that—in our services, merchandising, and our economics.

WITHIN the last years, the advantages of shopping at the Kline Furniture Company have increased tremendously. Many busses will bring you directly to our door. Driving your own car is extremely convenient. For we will park it for you free of charge in our own parking lot.

WE PARTICULARLY stress truth in advertising. No excuses, we sell the merchandise we advertise. We sell no seconds. We feature many nationally known makes. For the convenience of our customers, we are open evenings by appointment. Phone 2708. There is no extra charge for our easy budget payment plan.

THE DAILY STORY

ESCAPE ARTIST

Romance after Dark, an Old Car and an Invitation to the Ball That Wasn't Answered

BY MARY DRAKE

"You look beautiful, Miss Rosalind," Peg said admiringly as she tucked the last exquisite curl in place on the young blonde head of her mistress and caught a glimpse of the final ensemble in the mirror of the dressing table. "You'll be the belle of the Anniversary Ball, for certain!"

"Naturally!" the spoiled young woman agreed readily, as though Peg, her own age, had stated a naive axiom. "You don't think that Philip Travis is coming all the way down to Riverdale to see any of the local frumps, do you?"

"You don't mean Philip Trevis . . . the one who was decorated in the American embassy service?" Peg's eyes, blue and honest, widened in pleasure at the prospect for Rosalind. "He's terribly handsome, isn't he?" Rosalind turned before the mirror and inspected the back of her latest Worth evening creation artistically.

"Peg! You've ruin my gown with your carelessness!" she rapped out petulently. "You've spilled something down the back of it. Get the black with the shinestone shoulder straps, and hurry. I don't want to be late!" Pegs face reddened, but she kept silence.

"I'll take your gown out and have it cleaned, Rosalind," she promised contritely as she took the discarded garment from the floor, lifting its simple white loveliness from the silken pool into which it had dropped. It was only a few drops of brilliantine!"

"I don't care what you do with it—I can't wear it any more! But hurry, you slowpoke! I want the garnet ear rings and bracelet. With the black . . . Philip likes sopristication!"

Peg glanced hurriedly at the slim traveling clock on the dressing table and conscientiously speeded up her ministrations. It wasn't so very important of course, but she also was attending the Anniversary Ball.

Peg's Face Reddened

She would be late, after changing into her own well-worn gown, but it didn't matter so very much.

Within 10 minutes the family chauffeur had brought the second-best sedan around to the side entrance and had wafted the family pride away to the ball. Peg stood there at the doorway with something very like envy flickering in her eyes. The very invincibility of Rosalind's demands defeated her. It would be a perfect heaven to have one's whims obeyed . . . just once!

With a smile she smiled in tacit understanding at the housekeeper, and turned, away to attend to her own meager dressing. The thought of the soiled gown came automaticalyl. It would be a further hindrance, cleaning the spots before she dressed. Removing it from the hanger, she took it downstairs to the bueler's pantry and hunted for some cleaning fluid.

"'Tis a fine gown you have, Miss Peg," the housekeeper complimented as she came in while the cleaning process was going on. "You bustle along upstairs and dress whilst I take out these spots. By the luck of the innocents, you've got but a few tiny ones on the back, and they can be covered with the tie!"

"But—" Peg commenced to explain the mistake, but a sudden imp in her mind stopped her. "All right, Mrs. Timmons. I'll be ready for it in a few minutets."

"The chauffeur had not yet returned from driving Rosalind to the country club, and the other cars were all in use evidently. Peg hit her lip in impatience. It was two miles to the nearest car line. Bravely she started out down the suburban highway in her shimmering finery.

She could hear the nosy approach of the battered roadster long before the beams from the headlights picked out the white sheen of her gown at the side of the road. Protestingly, the brake slowed the car down at her side and a youthful head inclined over the side toward her, smiling.

"I'm going your way, if you don't mind a bit of informality," the young man grinned invitingly. Peg looked momentarily at him, and then without preamble, she climbed up into the seat beside him. If it was adventure she had started, she may as well go through with it.

"I was going to the country club," she said. "The cars were all in use and it would take hours to get a taxi way out here." The young man stepped blithly on the gas and they rattled on. His light topcoat concealed evening dress, Peg noticed.

"We're both late for the ball, miss," he laughed. "I got lost on the way down from town, but I didn't want to come, really, until just now. The evening begins to look bright already. You can call me Philip if you want, but my boss calls me Mr. Trevis. How about you?"

Peg drew in her breath. "Peg will bring me at any time," she supplied. Trevis gave a slight not of approbation.

"Peg suits me! I'm hoping that you'll help me out in return for the lift by saving me from stuffed shirts and mammas with awful daughters and designs in their hearts tonight," he pleaded. "We victims of circumstances must stick together."

Peg relaxed and smiled.

"It's a bargain," she promised with sudden determination. Her trepidation at angering Rosalind disappeared under the warming glow of pleasure her benefactor gave to the evening. They danced, walked in the pleasant dimness of the terrace, and Peg skillfully piloted Philip away from scheming entanglements with an adroitness which drew commendation form him. Unaccountably Rosalind failed to appear during the whole evening and when the last dance had ended Philip drove her home.

"You've given me a heavenly evening, Philip," she thanked him as they drew up to the house at last. "I feel like Cinderella." His hand tightened over hers.

"This isn't as good as a pumpkin coach, Peg," he solemnly stated, "but it has the advantage of being at your disposal, complete with driver, whenever you want it."

Peg felt belatedly guilty. "Rosalind Banning had you docketed as fair prey for this evening," she admitted honestly, "She's my employer . . . and it's her dress I'm wearing. Something must have happened. She didn't come."

"Rosalind Banning? Why, she called me in town and wanted to know if I was coming," he laughed amusedly. "I told her I was leaving for China."—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Child Discipline Is Overdone by Many Parents

Elders Who Lack Control Should Be Careful with Children

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

"Dear Dr. Myers: My daughter is a year and eight months old. My problem with her is that she squeals at the top of her lungs for everything and anything. Ignoring her did no good. It made me lose my temper several times, as she would scream until she got what she wanted, and I'd slap her hands and try to break her of it. This did no good. Now when I try to carry her into the house from out of doors where she prefers to be, she screams and hits me with her little hand.

"In all else she is a model child, understands everything and is tractable and gentel. My friends would never believe she had a fault. Therefore, I feel that I'm the one who's responsible for any bad trait she might have. Kindly advise me about my behavior toward her in this squealing streak she has and I'll be forever grateful.

"I'm a constant reader of your articles. I clip them for the reference of my friends who also have little children. I enclose a stamped, self-adderssed envelope."

My Reply

"How vividly you write. No one would doubt that you are trying to do your very best, and I don't believe your problem is nearly so serious as you suppose it is.

"If when you feel relaxed, you will think over the matter, you will see that in such cases as you have described so clearly you will have no occasion to punish the child or feel angry at her; that to punish her then would not be effective, as you already have discovered.

"Just work on yourself. Expect her to cry and squeal for what she wants, only do not let her have what she cries and squeals for. Plan just what she must not have, and manage yourself so you won't let her have it. Once you are sure about your plans, her crying and squealing won't make you nervous. We parents don't get nervous over what we know the child will naturally do. Looking at it this way, you will find that your vexation at your little child will wane or wholly disappear.

Take an Absence

"To this end you will feel more poised if you get more rest and relaxation. Leave the baby with Dad now and then and get away for some recreation. Better still if you can have some reliable person care for this child so you and Dad can go away from home occasionally for some fun together.

"Sing lullabies, say nursery rhymes and read, to her. I have marked some books on the enclosure good to begin with.

"Patiently try to get her to come indoors without resistance. If you must bring her in bodily, begin at once to talk of something very precious to her, or of the story you are going to read when you get into the house. Answer all her questions always. Listen patiently to what she has to say. Show great interest in her crudest play and creations. And good luck."

It is a good time now for us to pray for poise and guidance in the bringing up of our children. To this end I have written a Parent's Prayer for myself. You may have a copy of it by writing me at 235 E. Forty-Fifth Street, N. Y. City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Single Men First Mrs. Roosevelt Says

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt endorsed here the present policy of deferring the conscription of married men.

The idea, she said, is to disrupt community life as little as possible. She added that this does not mean married men will not be called if needed.

But here again the principle of selectivity would work, she explained. The first married men to be taken would be those "like my boys whose families would not starve."

The Roosevelt's four sons, whose ages range from twenty-four to thirty-three, are all within the draft age. All are married except James, the oldest, who was recently divorced.

Child Discipline Is Overdone by Many Parents

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

"Dear Dr. Myers: My daughter is a year and eight months old. My problem with her is that she squeals at the top of her lungs for everything and anything. Ignoring her did no good. It made me lose my temper several times, as she would scream until she got what she wanted, and I'd slap her hands and try to break her of it. This did no good. Now when I try to carry her into the house from out of doors where she prefers to be, she screams and hits me with her little hand.

"In all else she is a model child, understands everything and is tractable and gentel. My friends would never believe she had a fault. Therefore, I feel that I'm the one who's responsible for any bad trait she might have. Kindly advise me about my behavior toward her in this squealing streak she has and I'll be forever grateful.

"I'm a constant reader of your articles. I clip them for the reference of my friends who also have little children. I enclose a stamped, self-adderssed envelope."

My Reply

"How vividly you write. No one would doubt that you are trying to do your very best, and I don't believe your problem is nearly so serious as you suppose it is.

"If when you feel relaxed, you will think over the matter, you will see that in such cases as you have described so clearly you will have no occasion to punish the child or feel angry at her; that to punish her then would not be effective, as you already have discovered.

"Just work on yourself. Expect her to cry and squeal for what she wants, only do not let her have what she cries and squeals for. Plan just what she must not have, and manage yourself so you won't let her have it. Once you are sure about your plans, her crying and squealing won't make you nervous. We parents don't get nervous over what we know the child will naturally do. Looking at it this way, you will find that your vexation at your little child will wane or wholly disappear.

Take an Absence

"To this end you will feel more poised if you get more rest and relaxation. Leave the baby with Dad now and then and get away for some recreation. Better still if you can have some reliable person care for this child so you and Dad can go away from home occasionally for some fun together.

"Sing lullabies, say nursery rhymes and read, to her. I have marked some books on the enclosure good to begin with.

"Patiently try to get her to come indoors without resistance. If you must bring her in bodily, begin at once to talk of something very precious to her, or of the story you are going to read when you get into the house. Answer all her questions always. Listen patiently to what she has to say. Show great interest in her crudest play and creations. And good luck."

It is a good time now for us to pray for poise and guidance in the bringing up of our children. To this end I have written a Parent's Prayer for myself. You may have a copy of it by writing me at 235 E. Forty-Fifth Street, N. Y. City., enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Single Men First Mrs. Roosevelt Says

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt endorsed here the present policy of deferring the conscription of married men.

The idea, she said, is to disrupt community life as little as possible. She added that this does not mean married men will not be called if needed.

But here again the principle of selectivity would work, she explained. The first married men to be taken would be those "like my boys whose families would not starve."

The Roosevelt's four sons, whose ages range from twenty-four to thirty-three, are all within the draft age. All are married except James, the oldest, who was recently divorced.

Office of CBS Bombed

NEW YORK, Sept. 19 (AP)—The London office of the Columbia Broadcasting System has been partially wrecked by German bombs, Edward R. Murrow, chief of the CBS European staff, said in a broadcast from London heard here.

Murrow said that the two top floors of the building were in the street but that a survey was necessary before the complete damage could be determined.

You Still Won't Get Rich, But Army Life Is Better

By CLARENCE JOHNSON
AP Feature Service

FORT LEAVENWORTH, Kas.—A stern-faced Uncle Sam shouts from a recruiting poster—a medical officer thumps the chest of a half-naked youth—"I do solemnly swear that I will bear true faith and allegiance—."

Another recruit enlists in the Army.

For three years, at least, the Army will be his alma mater, putting him to bed, calling him in the morning and caring for him when he is sick.

What will be his lot as compared with that of another youth, possibly his father, who joined up 25 years ago?

Four staff sergeants, all veterans, agreed during an informal chin session on this answer.

Clothing, food and accommodations are better; duty hours, while generally longer, are more interesting, and the sergeants—"the worst of all" in the old Army song—have a more indirect approach toward the erring rookie.

No More Strangling

Take the new uniform. It is designed for comfort with its roll collar blouse, slacks and improved headgear. The old uniform had a high military collar under which was worn a starched stock. Plus, of course, a cap visor that nearly touched the nose. The leg-binding puttees and the pesky breeches you couldn't shed without removing your shoes.

Says Jesse C. Kelley, 22 years a master sergeant:

"In the old days it was necessary to get a tailor-made unifrom to look anywhere near decent. Now that's the exception. Uniforms are issued in about 40 sizes and it's unusual that a man doesn't get a good fit."

As for food, the sergeants recalled the days when coffee was served without cream or sugar and the bread was coarse stuff, called Army issue.

U. S. Army Signal Corps

Today's doughboy wears straight trousers with light leggings, comfortable collars, uniforms that fit. Unchanged are the broad-toed shoes.

"What we got in the old Army was substantial," explained Kelley, "but it got mighty tiresome. Now there is more variety in the menu and the food is better prepared."

KP Has It Softer

Army cooks, who must go to school, preside over modern kitchens with electric or gas ranges, pressure cookers and a battalion of mechanical gadgets. No longer does the mess sergeant hover around a rookie peeling potatoes to see that he doesn't manicure too deeply. The spud-peeling machine took the sting out of KP.

In the old days food was placed on the table and the soldier had to clean his plate. Cafeteria style distribution has replaced that. The diner regulates his helping according to his hunger.

Along with better food has come better sleep. Four-inch mattresses have taken the place of the pre-World war article which Kelley described as "thin as a board and just as hard."

The first book printed in the New World is thought to be a translation from Latin into Spanish of "The Spiritual Ladder," in 1535. Juan de Zumarra, Franciscan monk, first bishop of Mexico, printed it.

Twin Rescues Sister

WACO, Tex., Sept 19 (AP)—Lois Bailey didn't feel well on registration day at Baylor University.

Louise Bailey, her twin sister, came to the rescue. Louise went through the lines twice — once for herself and once for Lois.

The care of a baby is estimated as a full-time job for five hours and forty-one minutes a day, and a part-time job the rest of the time.

Italy and Japan top the list in the number of eathquakes experienced, each country having had more than 27,000 in the last fifty years.

Concert Campaign Drive Continues

Memberships reported following the meeting of workers in the Cumberland Co-operative Concert Association last night have far exceeded the number usually received in the same time in previous years. Mrs. R. Arden Lowndes, membership chairman, emphasized that the more members in the association, the more outstanding concerts will be available for the sixth season of Co-operative concerts.

According to Mrs. Lowndes, officers of the local association are encouraged with the response shown the drive. At last night's meeting incomplete reports showed that many persons have renewed memberships in the association, and at the same time there were many new members.

Interested persons are invited to come to headquarters, 109 Baltimore street, or to telephone 3545. Although many workers are active in the membership drive, it is impossible that they contact all persons interested in furthering music in Cumberland.

Personal Items

Mrs. William H. Strickler, Greene street, and Mrs. James Clise, of Westernport have returned from Baltimore where they visited Mrs. Borden Larue.

these matters can be settled by arbitration.

"We feel that there is nothing "ridiculous" in our offer to arbitrate. Possibly it is ridiculous to strike against this offer to arbitrate.

"It is unfortunate that when all other questions have been settled by the Washington agreement, the grievances over discipline may not be promptly arbitrated. We would suggest that if Mr. Dundon is correctly quoted as saying "a ratified contract awaited only signatures of the representatives of the management and the union," then both sides should sign the contract and agree to arbitrate the grievances on discipline. This, we believe is the fair and honorable settlement for all parties."

Bad Faith

resulted in the cessation of work. If the company were sincerely willing to reach a compromise, it would have seriously considered our counter proposal. The compromise we offered to management was fair and honorable. It was the basis for an agreement. If management had been willing to give it fair consideration, an agreement would have been reached. But management was not willing to give it real consideration because management did not want a compromise. It wanted to fire the two workers in question, probably fires others, and take some disciplinary action against still other workers whom the company would not specify.

If the management was acting in good faith, it would have informed the union of the persons involved and the exact discipline it intended to take against them. Instead of that, the company chose to circulate the fear that many would be discharged, that many more would be severely disciplined, and that it would absolutely not compromise on the issue in any way whatsoever.

In closing, Dundon said, "we have no desire to create a picket line unless it is necessary. No Celanese worker will return to the plant until this dispute is satisfactorily settled.

"The Teamsters' Union of the American Federation of Labor has assured us of full co-operation in our dispute, and I want to thank them publicly for their support. This indicates that all elements of labor, no matter what their affiliation, recognize the justice of our cause."

Moorefield Lions Seek Completion Of Road Project

Hardy County Telephone System 'Worst in the East,' Club Hears

MOOREFIELD, W. Va., Sept. 19—An immediate effort will be made by the Moorefield Lions club to secure the completion of the six-mile stretch of road linking West Virginia and Virginia near Wardensville. The John Marshall highway, which now stops at the West Virginia line, coming from Washington to Strasburg, Va., would save fifty miles between the national capital and Charleston, the state capital.

A resolution will be sent to the West Virginia State Road Commission requesting the completion of this link, pointing out that a prison camp is now within ten miles of the site and that it would be only a small addition to the present road building program in Hardy county. A copy of the resolution will be sent to the Capon Valley Board of Trade and the Strasburg Chamber of Commerce.

H. Gus Muntzing, president, appointed John T. St. Clair and H. R. Shields as a committee to investigate the possibility of forming a school safety patrol.

Judge H. M. Calhoun, S. L. Dodd and H. R. Shields were appointed as a committee to determine ways and means of securing a county-wide phone service. County agent S. L. Dodd declared, "Hardy county has the worst phone system of any county in the east" and pointed out that it is impossible to phone any point in the county other than in the western part of the county along the South Branch Valley. It is possible to reach Wardensville by calling through Romney, but no other parts of the county are accessable by phone he said.

It came out in the discussion of the problem that the present phone company in Moorefield offered to install lift phones in the place of the obsolete crank system if more subscribers were secured and that a rural service would be instituted if one customer per mile at a rate of $1.50 per month were signed up.

Ralph J. Bean, chairman of the Committee to secure a foot bridge across the South Fork River on Main street reported $3,000 had been allocated to erect the structure by the State Road Commission and that the contract would be let in the immediate future.

Steps are being taken to see if Moorefield can secure a municipal air port. It was pointed out that more people in Moorefield are interested in aviation than all the other towns in the South Branch Valley together, but hat Moorefield is the only town without a landing field.

The Rev. Raymond Musser, of the Duffey Memorial Methodist church was the guest speaker on the program and gave an address on "Americanism and Religion". Mr. Musser noted the basic importance of religion and religious freedom in the progress of America, from its founding to the present.

The next meeting of the Lions club will be a joint meeting with the Moorefield Woman's club, with the ladies serving the meal. The date was fixed for October 7.

Garrett County Reports First Case of Polio

Little Chance of Epidemic, However, Health Officer Declares

OAKLAND, Sept. 19 — Dr. H. R. DuPuy, county health officer, announced today there is one case of infantile paralysis in the county, Bobbie Terrant, two and one-half year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Terrant, of Kempton, being the victim.

The child's right leg is affected. A diagnosis was made on Monday after Dr. E. E. Sollars, resident physician at Kempton, had called Dr. DuPuy into consultation.

The child's leg has been placed in a splint, and after the quarantine period has elapsed, the little boy will be sent to Baltimore, where treatment for restoration of the use of the limb will be administered for a period of several months, Dr. DuPuy said. The early application of splints and the follow-up treatments are said to be proving very successful.

This is the only discovered case in the county and is along the West Virginia border, it has been stressed.

Dr. DuPuy said that since the appearance of infantile paralysis in the county, the health department had been besieged with questions. One mother asked for a serum or vaccine for prevention or treatment. Others suggested closing of schools, movies, churches and all public gatherings, but Dr. DuPuy replied "no" to all these questions.

"The latest studies indicate that streams polluted with human excreta carry the virus which causes infantile paralysis," he said, "and the case at Kempton shows that the child was exposed to such pollution during recent high water there."

He quoted an article in the New York World Telegram which stated that the virus of infantile paralysis was carried in sewage, which provided additional reasons why all towns and cities will have to stop dumping their sewage into streams and lakes and provide adequate sewage disposal plants instead.

Dr. DuPuy said the one case in the county was too late in the season to cause any great fear of an epidemic. "But there is next year and the years to follow," he said, and wondered about the three communities of Oakland, Loch Lynn and Mt. Lake Park continuing to discharge untreated sewage into the Little Youghiogheny river.

Central High School Charges 'Untrue' and 'Unfair', Says Official

LONACONING, Sept. 19 — E. Price Steiding, assistant district NYA supervisor, branded as "untrue" and "unfair" today statements appearing in the Central high school paper, "The Orange and Black," blaming NYA workers for damage to some sixty school pictures.

Principal Arthur F. Smith, in an article in the school paper, had blamed "carelessness" of NYA youths for "destruction" of the pictures. Editorial comment estimated the damage at $300.

The NYA workers, according to the paper, were supposed to have broken the glass covers of the pictures while repainting the interior of class-rooms.

Steiding made public a letter from William Paul Cooper, Barton high school teacher, who supervised the painting project on behalf of the board of education, in which Cooper describes as "unlimited" the possibilities as to how the glass was broken. The letter said the pictures are now "in a heap, from being moved about by teachers and pupils . . . ."

Before the painting began, Cooper wrote, he took two Barton NYA girls to the school to take down and store the pictures under the supervision of Chip Grindell, janitor.

The pictures were taken down and placed cross-wise, in order to avoid breaking the glass, Cooper said, and stacked in piles, one pile for each twenty rooms painted. The girls stated they placed them exactly as ordered in the old library room, with only one picture slightly cracked, according to Cooper.

The supervisor said he assumed the storage room would be locked, but did not know whether it was or not.

Declaring he has made a full report to Superintendent of Schools Charles L. Kopp, Cooper said he had pictures to prove "Mr. Smith is wrong in most of his accusations." He stressed the fact that Janitor Grindell said positively he does not know how the glass was broken.

Cooper pointed out, too, that an estimate he had gotten from a hardware store here put the cost of cutting the glass to fit the frames at between $18 and $20 — instead of the $300 reported by the school paper.

Steiding declared that the accusations made by Principal Smith "were made without fair and complete investigation of the alleged damage" in view of the statements from Cooper and Grindell. He pointed out, too, that NYA agreed to furnish the labor for the painting project on condition school authorities assumed the responsibility and furnished supervision.

A further inquiry is to be made by NYA and school officials tomorrow.

One-Time Child Bride, Now Only 17, Convicted of Manslaughter

NEW MARTINSVILLE, W. Va., Sept. 19 (AP)—Mrs. Violet Delaney Long, a thin smile on her young face, heard a jury today convict her of involuntary manslaughter for the slaying of her husband and a few moments later was given her freedom on probation.

Reacting to the judge's leniency, the 17-year-old widow left the courtroom laughing and sobbing hysterically.

A few minutes after the jury returned its verdict in the shotgun killing of 27-year-old Okey Long last February, Judge James F. Shipman passed sentence of a year in jail and a $25 fine.

In consideration of Mrs. Long's two small children, one of them only five weeks old, he placed the one-time child bride on probation for five years.

A motion for new trial, made before sentence was passed, was denied by the court.

Her baby in her arms, Mrs. Long left immediately for the home of her parents near Waynesburg, Pa. Before she left, she told friends she planned to lead an exemplary life and live up to the terms of her probation.

She insisted throughout direct testimony and cross-examination that Okey Long was killed accidentally at their Silver Hill farm home and that she had not known the gun she had in her hands was loaded.

The case went to the jury at 5:06 p. m. yesterday. The panel was locked up overnight after failing to reach an agreement, but resumed deliberations this morning and announced a verdict at 11:50 a. m.

During the trial, Mrs. Long admitted numerous quarrels with her husband but said he was "king in a way, whenever he took a notion."

Other witnesses mentioned frequent quarrels between the Longs and said she threatened him. Mrs. Long herself testified that her husband mistreated her, slapping and shaking her.

Moorefield Lions Seek Completion Of Road Project

Hardy County Telephone System 'Worst in the East,' Club Hears

MOOREFIELD, W. Va., Sept. 19—An immediate effort will be made by the Moorefield Lions club to secure the completion of the six-mile stretch of road linking West Virginia and Virginia near Wardensville. The John Marshall highway, which now stops at the West Virginia line, coming from Washington to Strasburg, Va., would save fifty miles between the national capital and Charleston, the state capital.

A resolution will be sent to the West Virginia State Road Commission requesting the completion of this link, pointing out that a prison camp is now within ten miles of the site and that it would be only a small addition to the present road building program in Hardy county. A copy of the resolution will be sent to the Capon Valley Board of Trade and the Strasburg Chamber of Commerce.

H. Gus Muntzing, president, appointed John T. St. Clair and H. R. Shields as a committee to investigate the possibility of forming a school safety patrol.

Judge H. M. Calhoun, S. L. Dodd and H. R. Shields were appointed as a committee to determine ways and means of securing a county-wide phone service. County agent S. L. Dodd declared, "Hardy county has the worst phone system of any county in the east" and pointed out that it is impossible to phone any point in the county other than in the western part of the county along the South Branch Valley. It is possible to reach Wardensville by calling through Romney, but no other parts of the county are accessable by phone he said.

It came out in the discussion of the problem that the present phone company in Moorefield offered to install lift phones in the place of the obsolete crank system if more subscribers were secured and that a rural service would be instituted if one customer per mile at a rate of $1.50 per month were signed up.

Ralph J. Bean, chairman of the Committee to secure a foot bridge across the South Fork River on Main street reported $3,000 had been allocated to erect the structure by the State Road Commission and that the contract would be let in the immediate future.

Steps are being taken to see if Moorefield can secure a municipal air port. It was pointed out that more people in Moorefield are interested in aviation than all the other towns in the South Branch Valley together, but hat Moorefield is the only town without a landing field.

The Rev. Raymond Musser, of the Duffey Memorial Methodist church was the guest speaker on the program and gave an address on "Americanism and Religion". Mr. Musser noted the basic importance of religion and religious freedom in the progress of America, from its founding to the present.

Garrett County Reports First Case of Polio

Little Chance of Epidemic, However, Health Officer Declares

OAKLAND, Sept. 19 — Dr. H. R. DuPuy, county health officer, announced today there is one case of infantile paralysis in the county, Bobbie Terrant, two and one-half year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Terrant, of Kempton, being the victim.

The child's right leg is affected. A diagnosis was made on Monday after Dr. E. E. Sollars, resident physician at Kempton, had called Dr. DuPuy into consultation.

The child's leg has been placed in a splint, and after the quarantine period has elapsed, the little boy will be sent to Baltimore, where treatment for restoration of the use of the limb will be administered for a period of several months, Dr. DuPuy said. The early application of splints and the follow-up treatments are said to be proving very successful.

This is the only discovered case in the county and is along the West Virginia border, it has been stressed.

Dr. DuPuy said that since the appearance of infantile paralysis in the county, the health department had been besieged with questions. One mother asked for a serum or vaccine for prevention or treatment. Others suggested closing of schools, movies, churches and all public gatherings, but Dr. DuPuy replied "no" to all these questions.

"The latest studies indicate that streams polluted with human excreta carry the virus which causes infantile paralysis," he said, "and the case at Kempton shows that the child was exposed to such pollution during recent high water there."

He quoted an article in the New York World Telegram which stated that the virus of infantile paralysis was carried in sewage, which provided additional reasons why all towns and cities will have to stop dumping their sewage into streams and lakes and provide adequate sewage disposal plants instead.

Dr. DuPuy said the one case in the county was too late in the season to cause any great fear of an epidemic. "But there is next year and the years to follow," he said, and wondered about the three communities of Oakland, Loch Lynn and Mt. Lake Park continuing to discharge untreated sewage into the Little Youghiogheny river.

NYA Not Responsible for Damage To School Pictures---Steiding

Central High School Charges 'Untrue' and 'Unfair', Says Official

LONACONING, Sept. 19 — E. Price Steiding, assistant district NYA supervisor, branded as "untrue" and "unfair" today statements appearing in the Central high school paper, "The Orange and Black," blaming NYA workers for damage to some sixty school pictures.

Principal Arthur F. Smith, in an article in the school paper, had blamed "carelessness" of NYA youths for "destruction" of the pictures. Editorial comment estimated the damage at $300.

The NYA workers, according to the paper, were supposed to have broken the glass covers of the pictures while repainting the interior of class-rooms.

Steiding made public a letter from William Paul Cooper, Barton high school teacher, who supervised the painting project on behalf of the board of education, in which Cooper describes as "unlimited" the possibilities as to how the glass was broken. The letter said the pictures are now "in a heap, from being moved about by teachers and pupils."

Before the painting began, Cooper wrote, he took two Barton NYA girls to the school to take down and store the pictures under the supervision of Chip Grindell, janitor.

The pictures were taken down and placed cross-wise, in order to avoid breaking the glass, Cooper said, and stacked in piles, one pile for each twenty rooms painted. The girls stated they placed them exactly as ordered in the old library room, with only one picture slightly cracked, according to Cooper.

The supervisor said he assumed the storage room would be locked, but did not know whether it was or not.

Declaring he has made a full report to Superintendent of Schools Charles L. Kopp, Cooper said he had pictures to prove "Mr. Smith is wrong in most of his accusations." He stressed the fact that Janitor Grindell said positively he does not know how the glass was broken.

Cooper pointed out, too, that an estimate he had gotten from a hardware store here put the cost of cutting the glass to fit the frames at between $18 and $20 — instead of the $300 reported by the school paper.

Steiding declared that the accusations made by Principal Smith "were made without fair and complete investigation of the alleged damage" in view of the statements from Cooper and Grindell. He pointed out, too, that NYA agreed to furnish the labor for the painting project on condition school authorities assumed the responsibility and furnished supervision.

A further inquiry is to be made by NYA and school officials tomorrow.

NEW MARTINSVILLE, W. Va., Sept. 19 (AP)—Mrs. Violet Delaney Long, a thin smile on her young face, heard a jury today convict her of involuntary manslaughter for the slaying of her husband and a few momenis later was given her freedom on probation.

A few minutes after the jury returned its verdict in the shotgun killing of 27-year-old Okey Long last February, Judge James F. Shipman passed sentence of a year in jail and a $25 fine.

In consideration of Mrs. Long's two small children, one of them only five weeks old, he placed the one-time child bride on probation for five years.

A motion for new trial, made before sentence was passed, was denied by the court.

Her baby in her arms, Mrs. Long left immediately for the home of her parents near Waynesburg, Pa. Before she left, she told friends she planned to lead an exemplary life and live up to the terms of her probation.

She insisted throughout direct testimony and cross-examination that Okey Long was killed accidentally at their Silver Hill farm home and that she had not known the gun she had in her hands was loaded.

The case went to the jury at 5:05 p. m. yesterday. The panel was locked up overnight after failing to reach an agreement, but resumed deliberations this morning and announced a verdict at 11:50 a. m.

During the trial, Mrs. Long admitted numerous quarrels with her husband but said he was "king in a way, whenever he took a notion."

Other witnesses mentioned frequent quarrels between the Longs and said she threatened him. Mrs. Long herself testified that her husband mistreated her, slapping and shaking her.

FROSTBURG, Sept. 19 — Lewis M. Wilson, chairman of the Republican State Central committee of Allegany county, was the principal speaker here last evening at a political rally under the auspices of the Young Men's Republican club of Frostburg.

In the course of an interesting address, he urged all Republicans, as well as "Willkie Democrats" to unite behind the entire Republican ticket, including former Governor Harry W. Nice for United States Senator and Walter Johnson for representative in Congress from the Sixth district.

Mr. Wilson suggested that the best way to begin an active and effective campaign was to get out the new voters on registration days, October 1 and 8. He was assured by Noel Speir Cook, who presided, that the Frostburg club would assume responsibility for assisting in the registering of new voters in the seven Frostburg districts and No. 24, Eckhart; No. 17, Vale Summit; No. 30, Zihlman, and No. 19, Borden Shaft.

Announcement was made by Darrell Zeller, president of the club, that Walter Johnson will be at club headquarters Wednesday, October 23, at 10 a. m. for the purpose of meeting the members. Paul Fletcher, Cumberland, invited members of the club to go to Cumberland Setpember 28 and join the caravan being organized to escort former Governor Nice through Allegany county on a campaign tour.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

GUN AND Tommy were both feeling the restrictions in diet, despite the fact that they had been able to alleviate the discomfort by eking out the little store of cold bacon and such non-perishable stuff as they had been able to conceal. But this had now all gone, and they were down to only four cigarets, plus a collection of fag-ends, which they had carefully saved, and which would form some sort of a substitute when broken up and rolled in some tissue paper which Gun had found in a cupboard.

They found their day's rations—two loaves of bread and a quart jug of water, on the kitchen table. Sambo had been taken from them two days before, there now being nothing for him to cook.

They used half the drinking water to wash in, although they knew they would suffer for lack of it later.

About eleven o'clock, Trent strolled in, smoking a fragrant cigar.

"Well, you fellows—still enjoying yourselves?"

"Splendid, thanks!" retorted Gun, defiantly, while Tommy slipped around the table so as to get between the visitor and the door.

"Hullo, what's your game?" demanded Trent, sharply, spotting the move.

"Just this," said Tommy, with a nasty grin. "You seem determined to starve us to death, and before we get too near to it I am proposing to satisfy a growing ambition to knock your block off."

Trent laughed, and Tommy found himself staring into the muzzle of an ugly automatic.

"I've been expecting this move," Trent announced. "But I wouldn't try it, if I were you. Your obstinacy is rather tiring me, anyway!"

Tommy glared, snorted, then dropped his hands and u clenched them.

"That's better. Now, why not do what I ask, and you'll get all that you want, and more. Just think, now, of a nice, juicy steak, with spinach and potatoes. Coffee, liqueur brandy, and cigarets to follow, eh?"

"You can save yourself the trouble of talking about it," said Gun. "I dream of it every night."

"Do you?" Trent shot a quick glance at Gun. It seemed to him that he had started off much the more resolute of the two, though less talkative and openly defiant than Hazeldeane. But now it struck the astute Trent that he was weakening. Which proved that he was not so astute as he might have been, for that was precisely the impression that Gun desired to convey!

Now his expression was strained, and his fingers drummed restlessly on the table. Gun could act when he liked!

"Well, what's the answer to the usual question tonight?" Trent asked.

"The usual answer to the usual question," growled Tommy. "And now get to hell out of it—the place smells better when you're not here!"

That night they smoked the last of the cigarets, and in the morning when they woke they found the doors of the bungalow locked on the outside, and guards patrolling around the place who threatened them with their rifles every time they appeared at a lower window. They had now been deprived of what little liberty they had had.

That day was the worst they had had yet! The close confinement made them irritable, which state was accentuated by the inability to either wash or shave. Their water was issued in three small rations, and their thirst was too great to enable them to save the quantities about [illegible] necessary for anything like a wash, while Tommy's razor blades were now so blunt that it was impossible to shave without hot water and soap—and they had neither.

Trent did not enter the bungalow that day. He shouted his usual question from the garden, and Tommy hurled back a stream of abuse through one of the upper windows.

In the afternoon a gang of workmen arrived, and began to build a new section fence which, extending from one existing fence to the other, cut the lawn off from the bungalow.

"Now, what's the idea of that?" Tommy asked.

Gun shook his head.

"The only thing I can think of is that they don't want to reduce us in health too much—otherwise they'd have to nurse us before we could be of any use to them. So they're going to allow us the restricted exercise of the rest of the garden without the lawn."

When they rose next morning it looked as though this theory was correct, for the doors of the bungalow were unlocked, and the guards had been taken away, and were beyond the outer fence, as usual.

But the queer part of it was that in the new fence the gate stood open also, so they could wander about, or lie on the lawn as usual.

When Trent made his morning visit he seemed fairly amused about something, and Gun felt that he had something up his sleeve—especially as no deprivation had been made that day.

In the evening they were lounging on the lawn, when a sudden sound made Gun look quickly around. The gate had just been closed on them, and a guard was securing a padlock on it!

"Holy smoke!" exclaimed Gun. "So THAT'S the game, is it?"

"What is?" Tommy was sitting up, glaring around him.

"Don't you see? In the future they're going to keep us penned up here, without proper shelter, like a couple of wild animals."

Tommy Hazeldeane breathed heavily.

"By God!" he muttered, angrily. "Those swine may find that wild animals can bite, yet."

Gun shot an anxious glance at him. Tommy's nerves were beginning to rock badly.

"Keep cool!" Gun advised. "Remember, they're not the only ones with a game to play. We've got one too, you know!"

"I dare say, but, damn it! Isn't plan of yours into action, Gun? I mean this is getting a bit too thick!"

"Very soon, now," Gun comforted him. "But it won't do to be too precipitate. They mustn't suspect anything."

The sun disappeared, and darkness came, and with it the cold. The two men, devoid of any shelter or extra covering, shivered, and tried to keep themselves warm by trotting around their pen. But they were getting so weak from lack of proper food that they couldn't keep it up long enough to really warm themselves.

"One comfort," remarked Gun, as they sat down, panting, "there ought to be dew in the morning, and we'll be able to get some sort of an imitation wash from it."

Trent did not make his appearance at the usual time, but lights suddenly sprang up in the bungalow. They saw Sambo, aided by another man, laying a table for three. From the kitchen came sounds, and worse still, succulent, enticing, torturing smells were wafted to them on the night breeze.

Presently Trent and two other men made their appearance. One of them was an American who had formed part of the crew of the black plane, the other was a stranger, square-headed like a German.

Within the lighted room everything could be seen through the uncurtained window, and although Gun and Hazeldeane strove desperately not to look, the fascination was too great! They saw the three making merry over steaming dishes; saw the cool, bubbling champagne poured out into cut-glass goblets; watched with hungry, distended eyes the men lounging comfortably back in their chairs, replete with food, while the blue cigar smoke curled up in spirals toward the ceiling.

Gun rasped, with dry throat: "I'll say one thing for the fellow—he's certainly ingenious!"

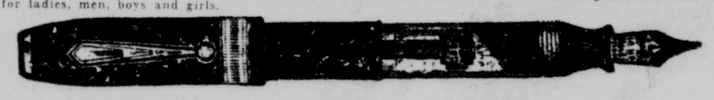

"The swine's lived too late," growled Tommy. "He would have made a fortune in the days of the Spanish Inquisition."

Suddenly Trent's voice came to them:

"I hope you fellows enjoyed the show!"

He was standing by the open window, puffing cigar smoke into the night air. It reached the two starved, shivering prisoners—a fragrant, tantalizing message. They gave him no answer.

Meyersdale Woman Will Return After 30 Years in Indian Mission

MEYERSDALE, Pa., Sept. 19—A revision in the schedules of the General Mission Board of the Church of the Brethren will give Miss Ida C. Shumaker an earlier start on her final furlough in her homeland than was at first anticipated.

Several months ago it was announced that Miss Shumaker would leave India as early as sailing could be arranged for in the month of January, 1941, but under the new arrangement she and another missionary, Miss Eliza B. Miller, will embark at Bombay, India, on the steamship "President Garfield," October 19 and if schedules of this steamship line on recent voyages are maintained, it is expected that the missionaries will arrive in New York about November 25.

Miss Shumaker, who taught twenty-two terms in the Meyersdale public schools before taking up her work as missionary teacher at Bulsar, India, in 1910, is a daughter of the late A. E. and Lydia Lint Shumaker, natives of Meyersdale. She was one of two to graduate in the first class of the high school here, the other being Miss Anna Grof, who still reside in Meyersdale.

During her thirty years in India, Miss Shumaker established several schools for children in the rural districts and also organized a congregation of worshippers and erected a fine church edifice in the village of Khergam. Its pastor and elder is Rev. N. A. Solanky, a native of India, who was one of the first pupils in a school that she established.

The church has been named the Ida Shumaker Memorial church in honor of its founder.

Miss Shumaker, who has spent several furloughs at home during her term of service on the mission field, will not return to India, but will do home missionary work for the church throughout the United States.

Support Nice and Johnson Too, 'Willkie Democrats' Are Urged

FROSTBURG, Sept. 19 — Lewis M. Wilson, chairman of the Republican State Central committee of Allegany county, was the principal speaker here last evening at a political rally under the auspices of the Young Men's Republican club of Frostburg.

In the course of an interesting address, he urged all Republicans, as well as "Willkie Democrats" to unite behind the entire Republican ticket, including former Governor Harry W. Nice for United States Senator and Walter Johnson for representative in Congress from the Sixth district.

Mr. Wilson suggested that the best way to begin an active and effective campaign was to get out the new voters on registration days, October 1 and 8. He was assured by Noel Speir Cook, who presided, that the Frostburg club would assume responsibility for assisting in the registering of new voters in the seven Frostburg districts and No. 24, Eckhart; No. 17, Vale Summit; No. 30, Zihlman, and No. 19, Borden Shaft.

Announcement was made by Darrell Zeller, president of the club, that Walter Johnson will be at club headquarters Wednesday, October 23, at 10 a. m. for the purpose of meeting the members. Paul Fletcher, Cumberland, invited members of the club to go to Cumberland Setpember 28 and join the caravan being organized to escort former Governor Nice through Allegany county on a campaign tour.

The executive committee of the club announced that details for organized work on the coming registration would be worked out at a meeting Wednesday evening.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

Trent was standing by the open window, puffing cigar smoke into the night air.

GUN AND Tommy were both feeling the restrictions in diet, despite the fact that they had been able to alleviate the discomfort by eking out the little store of cold bacon and such non-perishable stuff as they had been able to conceal. But this had now all gone, and they were down to only four cigarets, plus a collection of fagends, which they had carefully saved, and which would form some sort of a substitute when broken up and rolled in some tissue paper which Gun had found in a cupboard.

They found their day's rations—two loaves of bread and a quart jug of water, on the kitchen table. Sambo had been taken from them two days before, there now being nothing for him to cook.

They used half the drinking water to wash in, although they knew they would suffer for lack of it later.

About eleven o'clock, Trent strolled in, smoking a fragrant cigar.

"Well, you fellows—still enjoying yourselves?"

"Splendid, thanks!" retorted Gun, defiantly, while Tommy slipped around the table so as to get between the visitor and the door.

"Hullo, what's your game?" demanded Trent, sharply, spotting the move.

"Just this," said Tommy, with a nasty grin. "You seem determined to starve us to death, and before we get too near to it I am proposing to satisfy a growing ambition to knock your block off."

Trent laughed, and Tommy found himself staring into the muzzle of an ugly automatic.

"I've been expecting this move," Trent announced. "But I wouldn't try it, if I were you. Your obstinacy is rather tiring me, anyway!"

Tommy glared, snorted, then dropped his hands and unclenched them.

"That's better. Now, why not do what I ask, and you'll get all that you want, and more. Just think, now, of a nice, juicy steak, with spinach and potatoes. Coffee, liqueur brandy, and cigarets to follow, eh?"

"You can save yourself the trouble of talking about it," said Gun. "I dream of it every night."

"Do you?" Trent shot a quick glance at Gun. It seemed to him that he had started off much the more resolute of the two, though less talkative and openly defiant than Hazeldeane. But now it struck the astute Trent that he was weakening. Which proved that he was not so astute as he might have been, for that was precisely the impression that Gun desired to convey!

Now his expression was strained, and his fingers drummed restlessly on the table. Gun could act when he liked!

"Well, what's the answer to the usual question tonight?" Trent asked.

"The usual answer to the usual question," growled Tommy. "And now get to hell out of it—the place smells better when you're not here!"

That night they smoked the last of the cigarets, and in the morning when they woke they found the doors of the bungalow locked on the outside, and guards patrolling around the place who threatened them with their rifles every time they appeared at a lower window. They had now been deprived of what little liberty they had had.

That day was the worst they had had yet! The close confinement made them irritable, which state was accentuated by the inability to either wash or shave. Their water was issued in three small rations, and their thirst was too great to enable them to save the contraband short issue for yet that [illegible]

necessary for anything like a wash, while Tommy's razor blades were now so blunt that it was impossible to shave without hot water and soap—and they had neither.

Trent did not enter the bungalow that day. He shouted his usual question from the garden, and Tommy hurled back a stream of abuse through one of the upper windows.

In the afternoon a gang of workmen arrived, and began to build a new section fence which, extending from one existing fence to the other, cut the lawn off from the bungalow.

"Now, what's the idea of that?" Tommy asked.

Gun shook his head.

"The only thing I can think of is that they don't want to reduce us in health too much—otherwise they'd have to nurse us before we could be of any use to them. So they're going to allow us the restricted exercise of the rest of the garden without the lawn."

When they rose next morning it looked as though this theory was correct, for the doors of the bungalow were unlocked, and the guards had been taken away, and were beyond the outer fence, as usual.

But the queer part of it was that in the new fence the gate stood open also, so they could wander about, or lie on the lawn as usual.

When Trent made his morning visit he seemed fairly amused about something, and Gun felt that he had something up his sleeve—especially as no deprivation had been made that day.

In the evening they were lounging on the lawn, when a sudden sound made Gun look quickly around. The gate had just been closed on them, and a guard was securing a padlock on it!

"Holy smoke!" exclaimed Gun. "So THAT'S the game, is it?"

"What is?" Tommy was sitting up, glaring around him.

"Don't you see? In the future they're going to keep us penned up here, without proper shelter, like a couple of wild animals."

Tommy Hazeldeane breathed heavily.

"By God!" he muttered, angrily. "Those swine may find that wild animals can bite, yet."

Gun shook an anxious glance at him. Tommy's nerves were beginning to rock badly.

"Keep cool!" Gun advised. "Remember, they're not the only ones with a game to play. We've got one too, you know!"

"I dare say, but, damn it! Isn't plan of yours into action, Gun? I mean this is getting a bit too thick!"

"Very soon, now," Gun comforted him. "But it won't do to be too precipitate. They mustn't suspect anything."

The sun disappeared, and darkness came, and with it the cold. The two men, devoid of any shelter or extra covering, shivered, and tried to keep themselves warm by trotting around their pen. But they were getting so weak from lack of proper food that they couldn't keep it up long enough to really warm themselves.

"One comfort," remarked Gun, as they sat down, panting, "there ought to be dew in the morning, and we'll be able to get some sort of an imitation wash from it."

Trent did not make his appearance at the usual time, but lights suddenly sprang up in the bungalow. They saw Sambo, aided by another man, laying a table for three. From the kitchen came sounds, and worse still, succulent, enticing, torturing smells were wafted to them on the night breeze.

Presently Trent and two other men made their appearance. One of them was an American who had formed part of the crew of the black plane, the other was a stranger, square-headed like a German.

Within the lighted room everything could be seen through the uncurtained window, and although Gun and Hazeldeane strove desperately not to look, the fascination was too great! They saw the three making merry over steaming dishes; saw the cool, bubbling champagne poured out into cut-glass goblets; watched with hungry, distended eyes the men lounging comfortably back in their chairs, replete with food, while the blue cigar smoke curled up in spirals toward the ceiling.

Gun rasped, with dry throat:

"I'll say one thing for the fellow—he's certainly ingenious!"

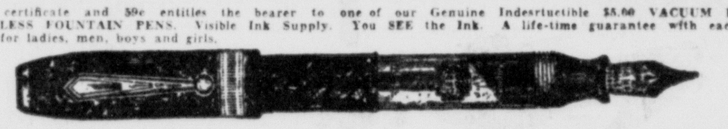

"The swine's lived too late," growled Tommy. "He would have made a fortune in the days of the Spanish Inquisition."

Suddenly Trent's voice came to them:

"I hope you fellows enjoyed the show!"

He was standing by the open window, puffing cigar smoke into the night air. It reached the two starved, shivering prisoners—a fragrant, tantalizing message. They gave him no answer.

Stocks Run into Profit Taking And Many Issues Close Lower

Steel Issues Are Strong and Aircrafts Do Fairly Well

NEW YORK, Sept. 19 (AP) — The stock market encountered profit taking handicaps today after four successive rising sessions.

The list got off to a fairly good start under leadership of steels but prices began to slip after mid-day and, at the close, top marks were well trimmed minus signs were plentiful.

The Associated Press average of sixty stocks was unchanged at 44.1. Transfers totaled 469,670.

Jones & Laughlin preferred was up 5¼ on a light turnover, and Republic Steel preferred gained 2½. Lesser advantages were held by U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, American Smelting, Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Pathe, Loft and U. S. Gypsum.

Lagging were Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, U. S. Rubber, Santa Fe, N. Y., Central, Standard Oil of N. Y., and Westinghouse.

NOT TO BE TERRIFIED

The perils of warfare at sea holds no terrors for Louise Platt in spite of the pleas of three men, Victor Mature, Bruce Cabot and Leo Carillo, in this scene from Hal Roach's sea story, "Captain Caution," now showing at the Maryland Theater.

Theaters Today

Sea Picture Is Maryland Feature

The production co-stars Victor Mature and Louise Platt, with prominent roles played by Leo Carrilo, Bruce Cabot, Vivienne Osborne, Robert Barrat, Miles Mander, El Brendel and Roscoe Ates.

The picture opens aboard the American merchant vessel, Olive Branch, shortly after the beginning of the War of 1812. The Olive Branch has been on the seas, homeward bound from the Orient, for 108 days and is unaware of the war on the high seas. It is captured by a British naval vessel and during the fighting, the captain is killed and his daughter, a high spirited, forceful young lady, as well as the rest of the crew are captured.

When, however, the Olive Branch is recaptured by an American vessel, Corunna, the Captain's daughter takes over. Although she is deeply in love with Captain Caution, played by Victor Mature, Corunna has him put in chains because he laughs at her plans to get a commission and to take part in the war.

From then on to the climax in French waters, the story fills the screen with scenes of excitement, action and romance.

Universal Feature Is Booked at Liberty

Rosalind Russell is starred in Universal's "Hired Wife," which comes to the New Liberty theater screen tomorrow.

Rosalind's first screen appearance was in "Evelyn Prentice" and she attained stardom in "Man-Proof." Following this picture she went to England to co-star with Robert Donat in "The Citadel."

The actress's outstanding role to date came in "The Women," in which she was co-starred with Norma Shearer and Joan Crawford. Then she was teamed with Cary Grant in "His Girl Friday."

Gene Autry Picture Is Offered at Garden

Gene's attacker is William Hall, who enacts the role of Gilman. Hall rushes toward the unarmed Gene with a crowbar in his hand, whereupon Gene tips over a rake, steps on it, and brings it up between Hall's legs. As Hall goes sprawling, Gene tips a tin bucket over his head, rams his fist down on to wedge it tighter, and the battle is practically over.

Supporting roles in "In Old Monterey" are filled by Smiley Burnette, June Storey, George "Gabby" Hayes, the Hoosier Hot Shots, Sarie and Sallie, and Billy Lee.

Also on the Garden program is "Those High Grey Walls," featuring Walter Connolly, Onslow Stevens and Iris Meredith.

Two Features Are Offered at Embassy

Jack Randall is the star of Monogram's "Covered Wagon Trails," now at the Embassy Theater.

The film has Randall in the role of a scout, defending the pioneers from the onslaughts of fur traders who wish to keep them out of the west.

Outstanding in the cast are David Sharpe, Sally Cairns, Lafe McKee, Bud Buster, and Glenn Strange.

The second feature on the bill is "The Lambeth Walk," starring Seymour Hicks and Sally Grey.

A shortage of pingpong balls, due to the war, clears up an amusing social contre-temps for the dizzy host who now and then cut one in two for a lime.

APPEALING LOVE STORY

The story of "Brigham Young" was written especially for the screen by the famous Louis Bromfield. Tyrone Power is starred, and Linda Darnell heads the featured cast, which includes Dean Jagger as Brigham Young, Brian Donlevy, Jane Darwell, John Carradine, Mary Astor, Vincent Price, Jean Rogers and Ann Todd. Henry Hathaway directed. The picture remains at the Strand through Monday.

Stocks Run into Profit Taking And Many Issues Close Lower

Steel Issues Are Strong and Aircrafts Do Fairly Well

NEW YORK, Sept. 19 (AP) — The stock market encountered profit taking handicaps today after four successive rising sessions.

The list got off to a fairly good start under leadership of steels but prices began to slip after mid-day and, at the close, top marks were well trimmed minus signs were plentiful.

The Associated Press average of sixty stocks was unchanged at 44.1. Transfers totaled 469,670.

Jones & Laughlin preferred was up 5¾ on a light turnover, and Republic Steel preferred gained 2½. Lesser advantages were held by U S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, American Smelting, Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Pathe, Loft and U. S. Gypsum.

Lagging were Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, U. S. Rubber, Santa Fe, N. Y., Central, Standard Oil of N. Y., and Westinghouse.

The production co-stars Victor Mature and Louise Platt, with prominent roles played by Leo Carrilo, Bruce Cabot, Vivienne Osborne, Robert Barrat, Miles Mander, El Brendel and Roscoe Ates.

The picture opens aboard the American merchant vessel, Olive Branch, shortly after the beginning of the War of 1812. The Olive Branch has been on the seas, homeward bound from the Orient, for 108 days and is unaware of the war on the high seas. It is captured by a British naval vessel and during the fighting, the captain is killed and his daughter, a high spirited, forceful young lady, as well as the rest of the crew are captured.

When, however, the Olive Branch is recaptured by an American vessel, Corunna, the Captain's daughter takes over. Although she is deeply in love with Captain Caution, played by Victor Mature, Corunna has him put in chains because he laughs at her plans to get a commission and to take part in the war.

From then on to the climax in French waters, the story fills the screen with scenes of excitement, action and romance.

Universal Feature Is Booked at Liberty

Rosalind Russell is starred in Universal's "Hired Wife," which comes to the New Liberty theater screen tomorrow.

Rosalind's first screen appearance was in "Evelyn Prentice" and she attained stardom in "Man-Proof." Following this picture she went to England to co-star with Robert Donat in "The Citadel."

The actress's outstanding role to date came in "The Women," in which she was co-starred with Norma Shearer and Joan Crawford. Then she was teamed with Cary Grant in "His Girl Friday."

Gene Autry Picture Is Offered at Garden

Gene's attacker is William Hall, who enacts the role of Gilman. Hall rushes toward the unarmed Gene with a crowbar in his hand, whereupon Gene tips over a rake, steps on it, and brings it up between Hall's legs. As Hall goes sprawling, Gene tips a tin bucket over his head, rams his fist down on to wedge it tighter, and the battle is practically over.

Supporting roles in "In Old Monterey" are filled by Smiley Burnette, June Storey, George "Gabby" Hayes, the Hoosier Hot Shots, Sarie and Sallie, and Billy Lee.

Also on the Garden program is "Those High Grey Walls," featuring Walter Connolly, Onslow Stevens and Iris Meredith.

Two Features Are Offered at Embassy

The film has Randall in the role of a scout, defending the pioneers from the onslaughts of fur traders who wish to keep them out of the west.

Outstanding in the cast are David Sharpe, Sally Cairns, Lafe McKee, Bud Buster, and Glenn Strange.

The second feature on the bill is "The Lambeth Walk," starring Seymour Hicks and Sally Grey.

A shortage of pingpong balls, due to the war, clears up an amusing social contre-temps for the dizzy host who now and then cut one in two for a lime.

CELANESE STATEMENT

THE GATES OF THE PLANT ARE OPEN AND EMPLOYES WHO REPORT FOR WORK ON THEIR REGULAR SHIFTS ARE BEING GIVEN EMPLOYMENT.

EMPLOYES WHO ARE ABSENTING THEMSELVES ARE DOING SO ON THEIR OWN DECISION, OR ON ADVICE OF PERSONS OTHER THAN THE MANAGEMENT.

Celanese Corporation of America makes the following statement in order that its employes and the community may know the facts of the present situation with reference to operation: The company is, of course, ready and willing to continue to operate the plant.

The management of the plant was informed Tuesday, September 17, by Mr. Shelton Carner, a union committeeman in the Cellulose Acetate Department, that unless certain disciplinary action was revoked, the plant would be shut down. To Mr. Carner and to the Union officials authorized to deal with these matters

THE COMPANY OFFERED TO ARBITRATE ALL PENDING MATTERS OF DISCIPLINE

Acting under the leadership of Mr. Carner, employes in the Cellulose Acetate Department engaged in a sit-down, September 17, and their further activities resulted in the employes on the 11:00 p. m. shift leaving the plant that night shortly after they came to work.

The Company was not on Tuesday, September 17, the time of the sit-down, and has not yet been informed by responsible officers of the Union, that the Union approves Mr. Carner's action.

The managment was informed on September 17, that the sit-down in the Cellulose Acetate Department was not authorized by the Union.

The Company is willing to continue operations to the extent that it is possible to do so by the attendance of employes to their tasks.

The Company is willing to continue to operate under the terms of an agreement for temporary operation made at the suggestion of the Secretary of Labor on September 5th.

The Company is willing to sign the agreement formulated at the Department of Labor, to which the Company and the Union representatives there gave their approval.

The Company cannot agree that the plant can operate without discipline or that employes who leave their work and engage in violence are not subject to discipline.

The Company knows no better way of determining whether discipline is warranted than by submission of the facts in dispute to the judgment of an impartial arbitrator.

Cleveland and Detroit Tied for Lead

Indians Defeat Senators by a 3 to 1 Score

Harder, Milnar and Feller To Pitch in Order against Detroit

CLEVELAND, Sept. 19 (AP)—The hit-hungry Cleveland Indians drove to a 3 to 1 triumph over the hapless Washington Senators today to carry a first-place tie with the Tigers into their all-important pennant series opening tomorrow in Detroit.

Although the Nats garnered eight hits off Smith, who wrote his fifteenth victory into the records, the only one that counted was an eighth inning homer into the lower left field stands by Johnny Welaj, who batted for Leonard with Washington three runs behind.

Cleveland had only six bingles, but they came when they counted and Leonard himself helped the Indians' cause. Ben Chapman led off the second stanza with a single to center. Roy Weatherly popped out and with Lou Boudreau up, Leonard tried to pick chappie off first base. He threw so poorly that the ball went by Jack Sanford at first base. Ben made the most of the opportunity, going all the way to third and tallying on Boudreau's fly to George Case in center field.

The Senators then threatened several times, but three Cleveland double plays erased all threats of an honest-to-goodness uprising against Smith, ex-National leaguer who came to Cleveland after a record of 16-2 at Buffalo last year.

Oscar Vitt's boys, who make few honest hits but make the most of them, clinched the game in the sixth inning with a two-run stampede after two men were out.

Manager Vitt said Mel Harder, Al Milnar and Bob Feller would pitch in order in the three-game war at Detroit.

What are the Indians going to do about the Tigers?

"We're going to play three games at Detroit," said Vitt. "I'll do my talking after the series."

Cubs Hand Giants Another Defeat

NEW YORK, Sept. 19 (AP) — The futile Giants dropped their eleventh straight game today, the year's longest losing streak in the National League, as the Chicago Cubs pounded out an 8 to 2 score with fourteen hits.

Hank Leiber sent the Cubs in front with a three-run homer off Bill Lohrman in the third inning and Stan Hack hit another off Paul Dean with one on in the ninth. It was the ninth consecutive setback for Lohrman, who won his last game July 27.

Cardinals Take Two Games from Slumping Pirates

Hopes of Pittsburgh To Gain Third Place Are Jolted

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 19 (AP)—The hopes of Frankie Frisch and the Pittsburgh Pirates to oust St. Louis from third place faded quickly today as the rampaging Cards set back the Bucs twice 2 to 1 and 8 to 2 and boosted their margin over the fourth place Pirates to four and one-half games.

William Henry McGee set Pittsburgh down with five hits in the first game, two of them by trusty old Arky Vaughan, while the Cards were handing Rip Sewell, Pirate ace, his fourth defeat against fifteen victories.

St. Louis clinched the second contest in the seventh with five consecutive singles.

Yankees Stay in Flag Chase with Win over Chicago

Ruffing Has Good Day and Scores Fourteenth Victory

CHICAGO, Sept. 19 (AP)—The New York Yankees, still refusing to be counted out of the American League pennant race, overwhelmed the Chicago White Sox 10 to 1 today to take a firmer grip on third place and keep within four games of the lead.

Red Ruffing, the veteran who has been unsteady recently, had one of his better days, scattering seven safeties and getting scored on only when Joe Kuhel hit his twenty-fifth home run in the sixth inning. It was Ruffing's fourteenth win.

The Yanks kept up a 14-hit barrage throughout the game and never were in jeopardy.

Thirty Men Take Part in Shoot At Shrine Club

What was described by members as the finest and largest shoot ever held by the Cumberland Ali Ghan Gun Club took place at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club traps yesterday afternoon. Thirty shooters participated.

Espy Reighart, won two hams and the following men won one ham each:

Frank Billmyer; Joe Dennison; Tony Francis; W. W. Downey; Phil Morgart, William Powell, Dr. Emmett Lohr, John Stuckie, John Lightner, Walter Eiler; "Huck" McFerran and J. C. Powell.

The ham and beer prizes for non-shooters went to W. W. Downey who won a ham and Frank Smith who received a case of beer.

Following the shoot a dinner was served at the Shrine club attended by twenty-one of the thirty shooters who took part in the match.

The club voted to buy two new traps and passed a motion ordering the club house moved to a new location and a large porch added. Donations of $190 were made to help pay for the improvements.

Short talks were made by Frank Smith, Dr. A. H. Hawkins, Huck Mc Ferran and others.

The next shoot will be held Thursday September 26 at 2:30 o'clock.

Thurbon Is Fast

Because Bobby Thurbon at right half is somewhat of a speed merchant, Pitt hopes for more success on its famous reverses this fall. Last year the Panthers had Emil Narick, a fine passer but a slow runnner at right half, cutting down effectiveness of their running game.

"---AND THE ANGEL SINGS!"

My, my, pretty face, have you got trouble? Quit your squawking and get up and lick that guy! "Okay, me feex heem!" And The Angel, Maurice Tillet, did get up and beat Danno O'Mahoney, on top here during a wrestling match in Albany, N. Y. You didn't think The Angel lost, did you?

Red Sox Are Out Of Pennant Chase

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 19 (AP) — With Manager Joe Cronin on the bench with a spiked hand and a makeshift lineup playing, the Boston Red Sox lost their season finale with the Browns today, 2 to 1.

Dropping the two-game series to the Browns ended Boston's mathematical chances to win the American League pennant.

Indians Receive Cool Reception in Detroit

DETROIT, Sept. 19 (AP)—The Cleveland Indians received a cool reception tonight when they arrived here for their all-important three-game series with the Detroit Tigers opening tomorrow.

At Union depot a crowd of youths estimated by police at 200 hooted the Indians and "Lefty" Wiseman, Cleveland trainer, was struck in the back by an over-ripe tomato.

The crowd followed the Indians to their hotel and stood outside singing "Rock-a-Bye-Baby-in the-Tree-Top" until paper bags containing water were thrown from upper floor windows. The group then dispersed.

Bi-State Playoff Umpires Assigned

Umpires for games this week-end opening the four-club playoff for the Bi-State Baseball League championship have been assigned by Umpire-In-Chief "Bobby" Cavanaugh as follows:

Saturday—Frostburg at Midland, Merrbach (plate), Middleton (first base) and Layman (third base); Keyser at Cumberland, Dunn (plate), Sampsell (first base) and Bailey (third base).

Sunday — Midland at Frostburg, Dunn (plate), Merrbach (first base) and Middleton (third base); Cumberland at Keyser, Bailey (plate), Layman (first base) and Cavanaugh (third base).

Cavanaugh stated that Dyer and Kenney, also eligible for assignments, will not be available this weekend.

May Be Good Omen

Reds Continue Winning Streak

Paul Derringer Wins Twentieth Game as Champs Down Phils

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19 (AP)—Big Paul Derringer chalked up his twentieth victory of the season today as the champion Cincinnati Reds turned back the Phillies for the third straight day, 4 to 1.

Derringer held the Phils to seven hits and was seldom in trouble. Ben Warren's homer in the ninth saved the tailenders from a shutout.

Rookie Joe Podgajny of the Phils pitched on even terms with his famous mound opponent, but three errors by Bobby Bragan, Harry Marnie and Joe Marty in the second and third innings gave the Reds three unearned runs.

Cleveland and Detroit Tied for Lead

Indians Defeat Senators by a 3 to 1 Score

Harder, Milnar and Feller To Pitch in Order against Detroit

CLEVELAND, Sept. 19 (AP)—The hit-hungry Cleveland Indians drove to a 3 to 1 triumph over the hapless Washington Senators today to carry a first-place tie with the Tigers into their all-important pennant series opening tomorrow in Detroit.

Although the Nats garnered eight hits off Smith, who wrote his fifteenth victory into the records, the only one that counted was an eighth inning homer into the lower left field stands by Johnny Welaj, who batted for Leonard with Washington three runs behind.

Cleveland had only six bingles, but they came when they counted and Leonard himself helped the Indians' cause. Ben Chapman led off the second stanza with a single to center. Roy Weatherly popped out and with Lou Boudreau up, Leonard tried to pick chappie off first base. He threw so poorly that the ball went by Jack Sanford at first base. Ben made the most of the opportunity, going all the way to third and tallying on Boudreau's fly to George Case in center field.

The Senators then threatened several times, but three Cleveland double plays erased all threats of an honest-to-goodness uprising against Smith, ex-National leaguer who came to Cleveland after a record of 16-2 at Buffalo last year.

Oscar Vitt's boys, who make few honest hits but make the most of them, clinched the game in the sixth inning with a two-run stampede after two men were out.

Manager Vitt said Mel Harder, Al Milnar and Bob Feller would pitch in order in the three-game war at Detroit.

What are the Indians going to do about the Tigers?

"We're going to play three games at Detroit," said Vitt. "I'll do my talking after the series."

Cardinals Take Two Games from Slumping Pirates

Hopes of Pittsburgh To Gain Third Place Are Jolted

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 19 (AP)—The hopes of Frankie Frisch and the Pittsburgh Pirates to oust St. Louis from third place faded quickly today as the rampaging Cards set back the Bucs twice 2 to 1 and 8 to 2 and boosted their margin over the fourth place Pirates to four and one-half games.

William Henry McGee set Pittsburgh down with five hits in the first game, two of them by trusty old Arky Vaughan, while the Cards were handing Rip Sewell, Pirate ace, his fourth defeat against fifteen victories.

St. Louis clinched the second contest in the seventh with five consecutive singles.

Ruffing Has Good Day and Scores Fourteenth Victory

CHICAGO, Sept. 19 (AP)—The New York Yankees, still refusing to be counted out of the American League pennant race, overwhelmed the Chicago White Sox 10 to 1 today to take a firmer grip on third place and keep within four games of the lead.

Red Ruffing, the veteran who has been unsteady recently, had one of his better days, scattering seven safeties and getting scored on only when Joe Kuhel hit his twenty-fifth home run in the sixth inning. It was Ruffing's fourteenth win.

The Yanks kept up a 14-hit barrage throughout the game and never were in jeopardy.

Thirty Men Take Part in Shoot At Shrine Club

What was described by members as the finest and largest shoot ever held by the Cumberland Ali Ghan Gun Club took place at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club traps yesterday afternoon. Thirty shooters participated.

Espy Reighart, won two hams and the following men won one ham each:

Frank Billmyer; Joe Dennison; Tony Francis; W. W. Downey; Phil Morgart, William Powell, Dr. Emmett Lohr, John Stuckie, John Lightner, Walter Eller; "Huck" McFerran and J. C. Powell.

The ham and beer prizes for non-shooters went to W. W. Downey who won a ham and Frank Smith who received a case of beer.

Following the shoot a dinner was served at the Shrine club attended by twenty-one of the thirty shooters who took part in the match.

The club voted to buy two new traps and passed a motion ordering the club house moved to a new location and a large porch added. Donations of $190 were made to help pay for the improvements.

Short talks were made by Frank Smith, Dr. A. H. Hawkins, Huck Mc Ferran and others.

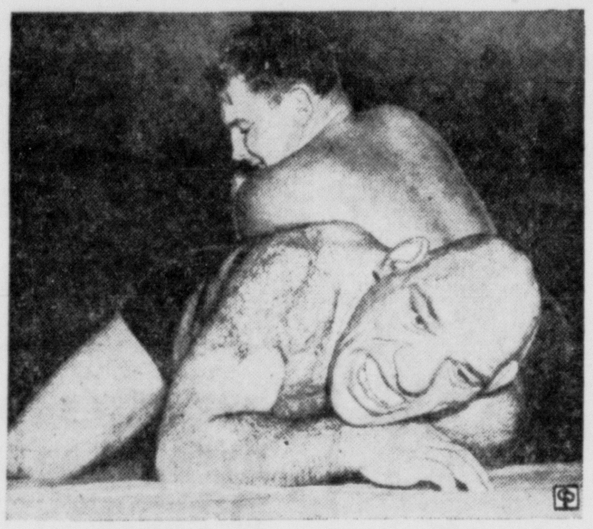

The next shoot will be held Thursday September 26 at 2:30 o'clock.

Thurbon Is Fast

Because Bobby Thurbon at right half is somewhat of a speed merchant, Pitt hopes for more success on its famous reverses this fall. Last year the Panthers had Emil Narick, a fine passer but a slow runnner at right half, cutting down effectiveness of their running game.

Red Sox Are Out Of Pennant Chase

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 19 (AP) — With Manager Joe Cronin on the bench with a spiked hand and a makeshift lineup playing, the Boston Red Sox lost their season finale with the Browns today, 2 to 1.

Dropping the two-game series to the Browns ended Boston's mathematical chances to win the American League pennant.

Indians Receive Cool Reception in Detroit

DETROIT, Sept. 19 (AP)—The Cleveland Indians received a cool reception tonight when they arrived here for their all-important three-game series with the Detroit Tigers opening tomorrow.

At Union depot a crowd of youths estimated by police at 200 hooted the Indians and "Lefty" Wiseman, Cleveland trainer, was struck in the back by an over-ripe tomato.

The crowd followed the Indians to their hotel and stood outside singing "Rock-a-Bye-Baby-in-the-Tree-Top" until paper bags containing water were thrown from upper floor windows. The group then dispersed.

Bi-State Playoff Umpires Assigned

Umpires for games this week-end opening the four-club playoff for the Bi-State Baseball League championship have been assigned by Umpire-In-Chief "Bobby" Cavanaugh as follows:

Saturday—Frostburg at Midland, Merrbach (plate), Middleton (first base) and Layman (third base); Keyser at Cumberland, Dunn (plate), Sampsell (first base) and Bailey (third base).

Sunday — Midland at Frostburg, Dunn (plate), Merrbach (first base) and Middleton (third base); Cumberland at Keyser, Bailey (plate), Layman (first base) and Cavanaugh (third base).

Cavanaugh stated that Dyer and Kenney, also eligible for assignments, will not be available this weekend.

May Be Good Omen

Reds Continue Winning Streak

Paul Derringer Wins Twentieth Game a Champs Down Phils

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19 (AP) — Big Paul Derringer chalked up his twentieth victory of the season today as the champion Cincinnati Reds turned back the Phillies for the third straight day, 4 to 1.

Derringer held the Phils to seven hits and was seldom in trouble. Ben Warren's homer in the ninth saved the tailenders from a shutout.

Three Football Games Here This Week-end

Charles Town To Play Fort Hill Here Tonight

LaSalle Plays Keyser and Allegany Meets Westmont Saturday

Cumberland's three high school elevens are nearly ready for week-end games here, with Fort Hill meeting Charles Town, W. Va., at the stadium here tonight at 8:15 o'clock; LaSalle playing Keyser, here Saturday afternoon and Allegany meeting Westmont high of Johnstown, Pa., in the stadium Saturday night.

Charles Town will be slight favorites over Coach Johnny Long's Sentinels tonight as the visitors are reported to have another strong team. They were good enough last year to nose out Fort Hill 21 to 20 in one of the most exciting games seen here in many years.

Fort Hill has dropped two games in a row to the West Virginians losing 20 to 0 in 1938 and 21-20 last year. Long has been pointing his team for tonight's game and hopes to break the victory spell of the visitors over the Sentinels.

Both Fort Hill and Charles Town won their opening games last week, the local eleven defeating Keyser 25 to 0 while Charles Town swamped Parsons, W. Va., 29 to 0.

Must Stop Whitmore

One of the men Fort Hill must watch in tonight's game will be Captain Leonard "Moon" Whitmore who was on the West Virginia All-State second team at fullback last year. He will team with Charley Reininger, Marshall Brown and Marion Sarra in what is described as the greatest backfield in the history of Charles Town high.

Saturday will find LaSalle playing, not only its first game of the season, but the first since the return of Pat Conway as coach at the Catholic institution. Conway has returned to LaSalle after coaching several years in Philadelphia and has been working hard with the boys. He naturalily hopes to start the season with a victory in an attempt to put LaSalle back in the winning column. He said his team will be light but fast and expects the boys to put up a good game.

Keyser Works Hard

Keyser which last to Fort Hill here last week has been working hard and may give the Catholics a tough battle at the Stadium Saturday afternoon. The team does not appear to be as strong as most Keyser elevens.

Allegany, victorious over Ridgeley, W. Va., here last week 21 to 6 has been hard at work this week preparing for Westmont. Last year the Pennsylvanians defeated the Compers 7 to 6 for one of the two defeats suffered by the West Side aggregation.

Westmont Has Veterans

Westmont opened its campaign by sinking Shade Township 19-6 last week, capitalizing to the fullest on three of its rivals' miscues after being outgained from scrimmage.

Coach Carl Eagh has a squad composed of slightly heavier boys than last year. The team has been built around eight lettermen—Riek, Kocis, Gyauch, Stiffler and Mishler, all backs; Weimer, a guard; Rabinowitz, a tackle, and Bud James, an end.

Stiffler improved steadily toward the latter part of the 1939 season and if his good work continues, is expected to be among the top men in the backfield.

In other games today, Parsons will open its home season by battling Elkins and the Petersburg High Vikings will launch their card by opposing an Alumni outfit. Other games on Saturday's slate are Broad Top at Hyndman and Moorefield at Greenbank in Moorefield's curtain-raiser.

Piedmont High, scheduled to open today against Capon Bridge, was notified that the latter school will not support a team this year. Coach John Casey of Piedmont today announced his boys would open against Ridgeley at Piedmont next Friday.

Silents Launch Grid Campaign October 12

ROMNEY, W. Va., Sept. 19—The West Virginia School for the Deaf football team won't open its campaign until October 12 because of the infantile paralysis epidemic in western and southern West Virginia, it was announced today by Coach Chester "Chuck" Collette.

Cancellation of the Silents' first two battles with Shepherdstown High and Fort Hill of Cumberland, Md., was also announced by Collette.

Collette stated his boys won't report for practice until October 2, giving the Silents just ten days to prepare for their initial test with Hyndman (Pa.) High here.

The cancellations leave six games on the locals' card with open dates Armistice Day and Thanksgiving. There is no infantile paralysis in eastern West Virginia but several of the boys attending the local school come from the affected areas. The revised schedule follows:

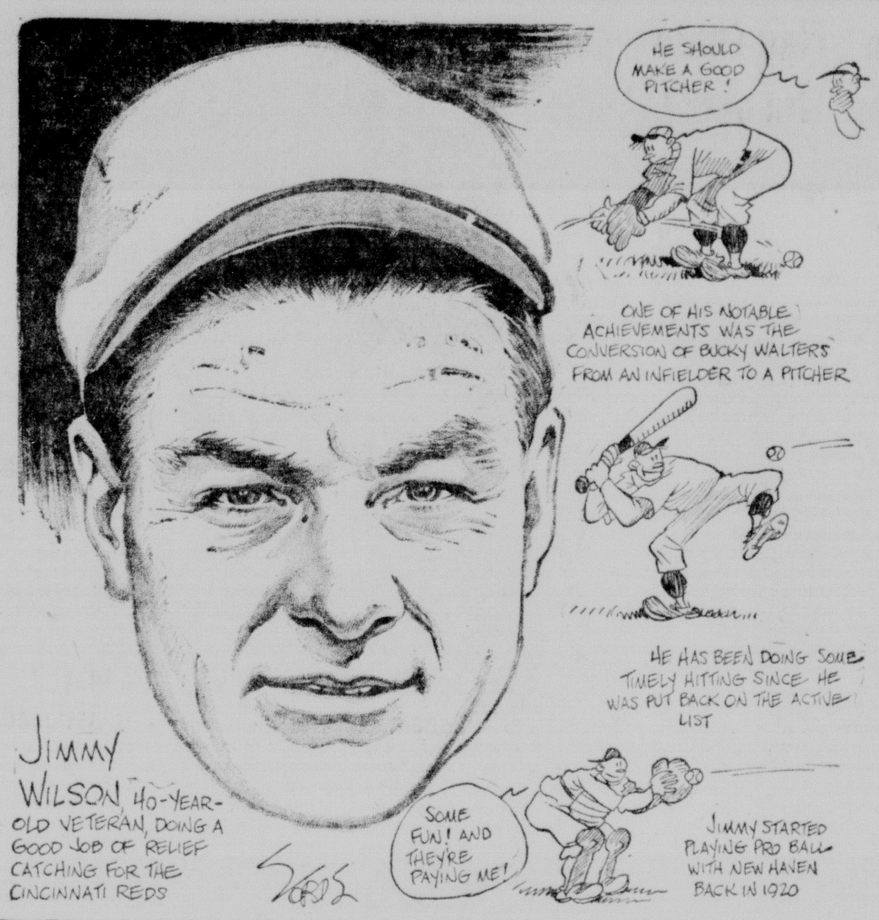

Oct. 12—Hyndman, home.
Oct. 18—Front Royal, away.
Oct. 26—Virginia Deaf, home.
Nov. 1—Terra Alta, away.
Nov. 8—Capon Bridge, home.
Nov. 11—Open, home.
Nov. 15—LaSalle, away.
Nov. 21, 22 or 23—Open, home.

NEVER TOO OLD - - - - - - - - - - By Jack Sords

GRANTLAND RICE

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

OLD GHOSTS RETURN

Since life is only for the brave and only for the free,
Their ghosts rise up to ride again — the ghosts of Grant and Lee,
Of Jackson and of Sheridan, now moving side by side,
To bring their spirit to the fight where only valiant ride.

By south and north — by east and west — by waving palm and pine,
Blue steel is flashing, blade by blade, along the battle line. ... .
When storms are beating on the world, what answer can there be?
Since life is only for the brave and only for the free.

In this brief span of smiles and tears — this whirl of right and wrong,
The only answer left is this — we suffer to be strong.
The weak and soft now stand aside — by plain and hill and sea —

The Tougher Team

Those active and rampant noncombatants supporting the American League are now all tangled up in a debate as to which team will be the stronger in a world series test — Detroit's Tigers or Cleveland's Indians — Detroit's punch or Cleveland's Feller?

A fellow like Feller is a big part of any part of baseball — whether it happens to be a 154 game pennant race — or a shorter world series.

Detroit has the better punch. And in Buck Newsom, Bridges and Rowe the hustling Tigers have a pretty fair brand of pitching to throw against Derringer, Walters and Thompson.

Cleveland has no such packages of dynamite as Hank Greenberg, McCosky, and Rudy York.

Cleveland is stronger in her infield play. But above all Cleveland has Feller.

The Question

The writing debaters, who ask you to help settle arguments, want to know—

No. 1 — Whether Derringer and Walters would rather face Bob Feller — or the Tiger attack—

No. 2 — Whether the Reds would rather try to stop Feller or make enough runs to offset Detroit's scoring power — I happen to know the Reds would rather have Cleveland win because the two problems I have mentioned are doubtful — while there is nothing doubtful about Cleveland's 80,000 stadium. That's set in advance. It is only waiting for Cleveland to win.

They figure an all Ohio series will pack any ball park in Ohio, an unusual sporting state.

If you don't think so take a trip some Saturday to Columbus when Ohio State swings into action.

Cincinnati and Cleveland will both be sell outs. You can't blame a professional ball player for looking in the general direction of the major financial returns.

How The Reds Feel

"No one can say what might happen in a short series," one of the Reds told me.

"No one can say whether Bob Feller and the Cleveland infield will be more dangerous than the bats of Greenberg, McCosky and York, plus the pitching of Newsom, Bridges and Rowe. Don't forget Buck Newsom has been as good this season as either Derringer or Walters — and Buck is no puff ball in a tough spot. We feel that Cleveland and Detroit are about the same.

We know what Feller means in any short series where they can use him at least three times if the series goes to seven games. But we also know that such pitchers as Derringer and Walters can hold their own with anybody, even a Feller. At least there'll be no four game mop-up this time. Whatever happens we all know it will be a tougher and a longer series."

Football Outsiders

"Why give all the credit to certain publicized football teams?" an old timer writes.

"What about Mississippi State, one of the best teams in the country? What about Duquesne and Georgetown, who are both strong? What about Auburn? And you can watch Ray Morrison at Temple this fall."

These are missiles that are hard to dodge. Both Georgetown and Duquesne have been on a high upper level for the last two years. They will be hard to roll back this season.

I happen to know that Mississippi State will be something to beat all fall.

Any coach from the deep south will tell you that.

The trouble is that with over 100 high class college teams, possibly 200 such teams, there isn't time enough or space enough to cover the long patrol.

As every one knows there are certain publicized highways in football — Notre Dame, Ohio State, Southern California, Michigan, Minnesota, the Ivy League, Duke, Tennessee, Georgia Tech, Tulane, Pitt, the Texas round-up, Nebraska —almost any big conference team— and these include only fifteen or twenty percent of the country's total.

There may be outside teams just as strong, often stronger, than the teams which get the headlines — Villanova, Georgetown, Detroit, Duquesne, Miss. State, Boston College, Holy Cross, Fordham, Marquette, Santa Clara, etc.

Their national publicity weakness is due to the fact that most of them don't happen to be part of any conference — east, west, south or north. Or it may be that most of them can't get on the publicized schedules.

It is easy enough to understand the hurt feeling of some team's supporter when his favorite campus is overlooked.

But the new football schedules show around 400 teams in action and who can follow the fortunes of 400 teams in a two month span? The Conference teams all have the headline jump, barring Notre Dame, which heads the pack on its own. In this respect Notre Dame is unique, the biggest single attendance card and intersectional interest in football.—North American Newspaper Alliance.

Pennant Race At a Glance

By The Associated Press

The American League was in a dead heat today as the Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers hit the home stretch for the first of six games they must play against each other before the season ends.

Detroit's sluggers pounded the Philadelphia Athletics mercilessly yesterday (Thursday) to take two games, 13-2, and 10-1, and move into a tie for the lead with Cleveland, which topped the Washington Senators, 3-1.

The New York Yankees shoved the Chicago White Sox virtually out of the pennant picture and kept themselves within four games of the lead on a 10-1 victory.

The standings:

Club	Won	Lost	Pct.	GB	TP
Cleveland	85	61	.582	—	8
Detroit	85	61	.582	—	8
New York	80	64	.556	4	10
Chicago	79	67	.541	6	8

Navy Coach Is Concentrating On Precision

Expects To "Polish Up" Grid Machine for Opening Game

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 19 (AP)—Maj. Emery (Swede) Larson, Navy's head coach, began concentrating today on precision in the execution of plays and on details of deception as the Middies passed their halfway training mark.

From now until the season opener Sept. 28 with William and Mary college Larson said he would "polish up" the Tar machine, with just enough scrimmages to keep the squad in top-form.

Barring injuries, Larson said he expected to have an eleven at least as strong as the 1939 unit.

The past two days of scrimmage against Rutgers university boosted the number of casualties to eight. Three Middies were injured yesterday—Capt. Dick Foster, left end, sprained his ankle; Phil Gutting, regular back, was kicked in the side, and George Ringenberg, a sophomore center recently converted to guard, hurt his shoulder.

Others on the casualty list are Clif Lenz, Bill Chip, Zeke Zechella and Bob Leonard, backs, and Bob Froude, an end. Froude, a junior and a letterman, probably will be out for the season with a torn leg muscle.

Zechella, a promising sophomore, hurt his ankle and won't be ready for the William and Mary game, Larson said. Leonard, who injured his left knee this summer, will be used only as a "pinch hitter" this fall. He will ply his trade as an expert placement kicker.

Lenz and Chip, who have been resting, are expected to be ready by Sept. 28 and Larson hopes Foster, Gutting and Ringenberg will have recuperated by that time.

Foster's place was taken today by Bob Zoeller, a 1939 Plebe, one half of the "touchdown twins". His sidekick, triple-threat Bill Busik, teamed up with him last year on the Plebe eleven.

The two-hour practice session today was devoted to fundamental and pass defense drills. Practically no heavy work was done, principally because scrimmages will be held with Georgetown university here Saturday.

Pitt Is Working Hard for Game With Ohio State

Most of First Team Positions Seem To Be Definitely Settled

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 19 — The situation by positions as the Pitt Panthers swing into the middle of their second week of practice—and with the Ohio State game at Columbus now less than two weeks away.

At left end Stan Gervelis is on the sidelines with a leg injury. In his place is Al Gurczenski, a third string tackle last fall. There is a possibility that Joe Rettinger, who is being worked at both sides of the line, may come back to his old post at left. John Stahl, with late-season experience last fall, is trailing Gurczenski at present.

Sinco Wins Center Post

Steve Sinco is secure at center, the big 210 pounder, always being good defensively, and this fall his passing has been all that could be asked.

Ralph Fife, speedy guard, has a chance to work his way into the ranks of Pitt greats. Over ten pounds heavier than last fall, he is more rugged, and has kept his charge of mobility.

Jack Benz at right tackle is due to start against Ohio. Smart defensively and big, he holds a slight edge over Bill Benghouser, 220 pound junior who has no game experience.

Joe Rettinger can keep his right end job, unless shifted to left again. Should this happen Jack Goodridge, a fine spot man, will complete the line. This shift would mean a drop in weight but an increase in speed.

Sekela at Quarterback

At quarterback Mike Sekela, understudy to Ben Kish last fall, has the call. He gives Pitt a 195 pound blocking back.

Left half will go to Edgar Jones, who has been doing a good job thus far, and gives Pitt a passer and runner in the tailback spot.

Bobby Thurbon, 168 pound speedster, will be at right half. He has two years experience and a pair of sticky fingers when it comes to grabbing passes.

George Kracum, 200 pounds of reformed halfback, will be at fullback. He provides passing strength, ball-carrying, and defensive height.

Sadowsky Is Assisting Coach Charlie Havens

WESTMINSTER, Md., Sept. 19 (AP)—Coach Charlie Havens got some expert help today for his Western Maryland football team when Al Sadowsky, former All-State W. M. tackle, showed up to aid in line drill.

Sadowsky, one of the best tackles in Western Maryland's history, worked at length with the line candidates and concentrated on the play of the tackles.

Intensive drill on fundamentals featured the hour and a half session this afternoon. Pass defense was stressed particularly.

With the exception of Fridel, a guard out with an arm injury, and Bill Walls, a tackle who has not yet returned to school because of illness, the squad is complete.

Shifted to Fullback

Because he is short of fullbacks Coach Jack Hegerty has shifted Bill McLaughlin, last year a triple threat halfback on Georgetown University's freshman eleven to a fullback. McLaughlin is a 195 pound husky with plenty of drive.

Large Squad Is Out at Romney

Romney, W. Va., Sept. 19—Football prospects are bright at Romney High School, Coach Bob Kyle reporting today that his squad of 38 boys is the largest in four years.

There is also quality with 23 holdovers from last year including nine lettermen. Those who won letters in 1939 and who are back in the fold are Paul Harmison, Frank Lewis, Harwell Thompson, Loudon Thompson, Raymond McDonald, James Wagoner, James Alkire, George Heavner and Bill Milleson.

Others with experience are Michael Cannon, Lyle Sneather, Madison Combs, Ivan Shanholtz, John Sietors, Randolph Ewers, Paul Ganoe, Charles Parsons, Robert Singhass, Charles Oates, Max McKee, Bill Michael, Buford Saville and Romanus Fisher.

Romney had been scheduled to open next Friday against Capon Bridge but the latter school notified Coach Kyle that it would have only six-man football this year.

Coach Kyle hopes to fill the open date but if he is unsuccessful, the locals will swing into action October 4 against Charles Town here. The schedule:

Sept. 27—Open.
Oct. 4—Charles Town, home.
Oct. 11—Franklin, away.
Oct. 18—Moorefield, home.
Oct. 25—Petersburg, away.
Nov. 1—Keyser, home.
Nov. 8—Ridgeley, away.
Nov. 15—Berkeley Springs, away.

Young Assistants

Charley Bowser, Pitt coach, has one of the youngest staffs of assistant coaches in the land. Bob Hoel, his first assistant, Bill Daddio, and coach, Harold Stebbins and Arnold Greene, backfield coaches, and Nick Kliskey, freshman coaches, are starting on their second year of college work. Kliskey's assistants, Dick Fullerton, John Dickinson and Harold Klein are in their first year.

Outdoor Club Will Open Its Bowling Season Here Tonight

The fourth bowling season for the Cumberland Outdoor Club will open tonight at 9 o'clock at the Roxy with six teams competing in the league.

The teams are the Blue Jays, Jay Birds, Bobwhites, Sparrows, Eagles and Catbirds. A split season schedule has been adopted with the first half ending December 27 and the last half closing April 9. Prizes will be awarded at the end of the grind.

Members eligible to roll are S. Aldridge, J. Dick, D. Stegmaier, E. Bittner, C. Gehauf, F. Hamilton, G. Lynn, K. Racey, H. Bolinger, R. Atwell, J. Stevenson, J. McGeady, R. Lester, W. Hartman, L. Three Football Games Here This Week-end

LaSalle Plays Keyser and Allegany Meets Westmont Saturday

Cumberland's three high school elevens are nearly ready for week-end games here, with Fort Hill meeting Charles Town, W. Va., at the stadium here tonight at 8:15 o'clock; LaSalle playing Keyser, here Saturday afternoon and Allegany meeting Westmont high of Johnstown, Pa., in the stadium Saturday night.

Charles Town will be slight favorites over Coach Johnny Long's Sentinels tonight as the visitors are reported to have another strong team. They were good enough last year to nose out Fort Hill 21 to 20 in one of the most exciting games seen here in many years.

Fort Hill has dropped two games in a row to the West Virginians losing 20 to 0 in 1938 and 21-20 last year. Long has been pointing his team for tonight's game and hopes to break the victory spell of the visitors over the Sentinels.

Both Fort Hill and Charles Town won their opening games last week, the local eleven defeating Keyser 25 to 0 while Charles Town swamped Parsons, W. Va., 29 to 0.

Must Stop Whitmore

One of the men Fort Hill must watch in tonight's game will be Captain Leonard "Moon" Whitmore who was on the West Virginia All-State second team at fullback last year. He will team with Charley Reininger, Marshall Brown and Marion Sarra in what is described as the greatest backfield in the history of Charles Town high.

Saturday will find LaSalle playing, not only its first game of the season, but the first since the return of Pat Conway as coach at the Catholic institution. Conway has returned to LaSalle after coaching several years in Philadelphia and has been working hard with the boys. He naturally hopes to start the season with a victory in an attempt to put LaSalle back in the winning column. He said his team will be light but fast and expects the boys to put up a good game.

Keyser Works Hard

Keyser which last to Fort Hill here last week has been working hard and may give the Catholics a tough battle at the Stadium Saturday afternoon. The team does not appear to be as strong as most Keyser elevens.

Allegany, victorious over Ridgeley, W. Va., here last week 21 to 6 has been hard at work this week preparing for Westmont. Last year the Pennsylvanians defeated the Compers 7 to 6 for one of the two defeats suffered by the West Side aggregation.

Westmont Has Veterans

Westmont opened its campaign by sinking Shade Township 19-6 last week, capitalizing to the fullest on three of its rivals' miscues after being outgained from scrimmage.

Coach Carl Eigh has a squad composed of slightly heavier boys than last year. The team has been built around eight lettermen—Riek, Kocis, Gyauch, Stiffler and Mishler, all backs; Weimer, a guard; Rabinowitz, a tackle, and Bud James, an end.

Stiffler improved steadily toward the latter part of the 1939 season and if his good work continues, is expected to be among the top men in the backfield.

In other games today, Parsons will open its home season by battling Elkins and the Petersburg High Vikings will launch their card by opposing an Alumni outfit. Other games on Saturday's slate are Broad Top at Hyndman and Moorefield at Greenbank in Moorefield's curtain-raiser.

Piedmont High, scheduled to open today against Capon Bridge, was notified that the latter school will not support a team this year. Coach John Casey of Piedmont today announced his boys would open against Ridgeley at Piedmont next Friday.

Silents Launch Grid Campaign October 12

ROMNEY, W. Va., Sept. 19—The West Virginia School for the Deaf football team won't open its campaign until October 12 because of the infantile paralysis epidemic in western and southern West Virginia, it was announced today by Coach Chester "Chuck" Collette.

Cancellation of the Silents' first two battles with Shepherdstown High and Fort Hill of Cumberland, Md., was also announced by Collette.

Collette stated his boys won't report for practice until October 2, giving the Silents just ten days to prepare for their initial test with Hyndman (Pa.) High here.

The cancellations leave six games on the locals' card with open dates Armistice Day and Thanksgiving. There is no infantile paralysis in eastern West Virginia but several of the boys attending the local school come from the affected areas. The revised schedule follows:

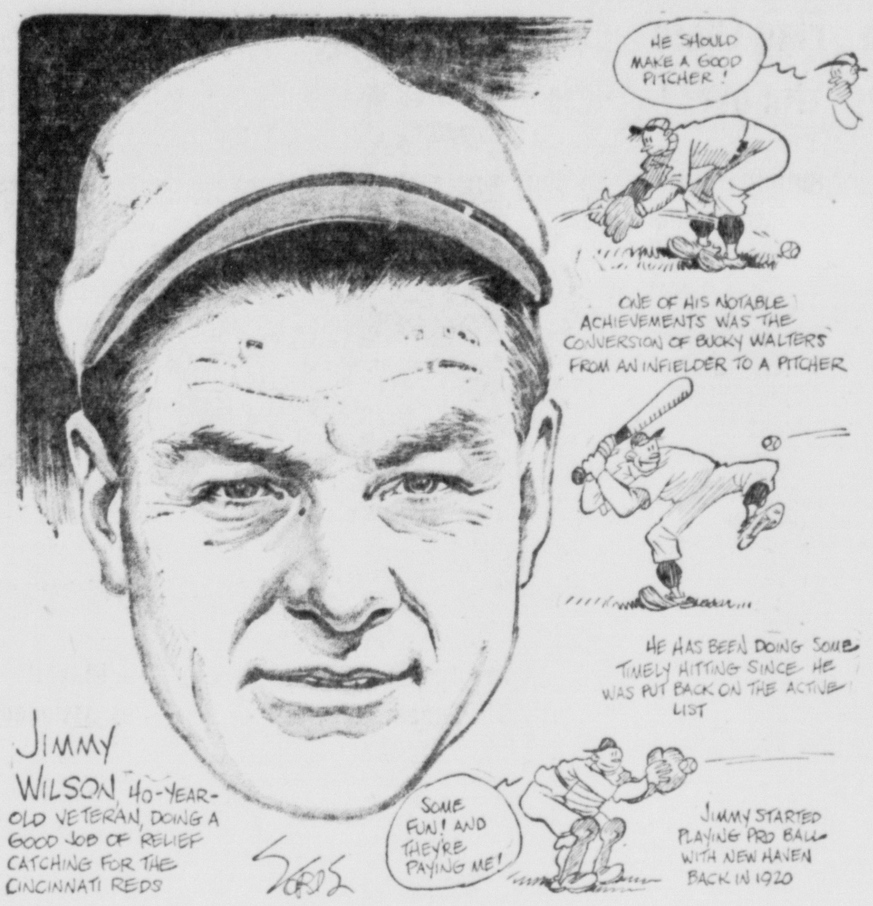

Oct. 12—Hyndman, home.
Oct. 18—Front Royal, away.
Oct. 26—Virginia Deaf, home.
Nov. 1—Terra Alta, away.
Nov. 8—Capon Bridge, home.
Nov. 11—Open, home.
Nov. 15—LaSalle, away.
Nov. 21, 22 or 23—Open, home.

GRANTLAND RICE

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

OLD GHOSTS RETURN

Since life is only for the brave and only for the free,
Their ghosts rise up to ride again — the ghosts of Grant and Lee,
Of Jackson and of Sheridan, now moving side by side,
To bring their spirit to the fight where only valiant ride.

By south and north — by east and west — by waving palm and pine,
Blue steel is flashing, blade by blade, along the battle line. ... .
When storms are beating on the world, what answer can there be?
Since life is only for the brave and only for the free.

In this brief span of smiles and tears — this whirl of right and wrong,
The only answer left is this — we suffer to be strong.
The weak and soft now stand aside — by plain and hill and sea —

The Tougher Team

Those active and rampant non-combatants supporting the American League are now all tangled up in a debate as to which team will be the stronger in a world series test — Detroit's Tigers or Cleveland's Indians — Detroit's punch or Cleveland's Feller?

A fellow like Feller is a big part of any part of baseball — whether it happens to be a 154 game pennant race — or a shorter world series.

Detroit has the better punch. And in Buck Newsom, Bridges and Rowe the hustling Tigers have a pretty fair brand of pitching to throw against Derringer, Walters and Thompson.

Cleveland has no such packages of dynamite as Hank Greenberg, McCosky, and Rudy York.

Cleveland is stronger in her infield play. But above all Cleveland has Feller.

The Question

The writing debaters, who ask you to help settle arguments, want to know—

No. 1 — Whether Derringer and Walters would rather face Bob Feller — or the Tiger attack—

No. 2 — Whether the Reds would rather try to stop Feller or make enough runs to offset Detroit's scoring power — I happen to know the Reds would rather have Cleveland win because the two problems I have mentioned are doubtful — while there is nothing doubtful about Cleveland's 80,000 stadium. That's set in advance. It is only waiting for Cleveland to win.

They figure an all Ohio series will pack any ball park in Ohio, an unusual sporting state.

If you don't think so take a trip some Saturday to Columbus when Ohio State swings into action.

Cincinnati and Cleveland will both be sell outs. You can't blame a professional ball player for looking in the general direction of the major financial returns.

How The Reds Feel

"No one can say what might happen in a short series," one of the Reds told me.

"No one can say whether Bob Feller and the Cleveland infield will be more dangerous than the bats of Greenberg, McCosky and York, plus the pitching of Newsom, Bridges and Rowe. Don't forget Buck Newsom has been as good this season as either Derringer or Walters — and Buck is no puff ball in a tough spot. We feel that Cleveland and Detroit are about the same.

We know what Feller means in any short series where they can use him at least three times if the series goes to seven games. But we also know that such pitchers as Derringer and Walters can hold their own with anybody, even a Feller. At least there'll be no four game mop-up this time. Whatever happens we all know it will be a tougher and a longer series."

Football Outsiders

"Why give all the credit to certain publicized football teams?" an old timer writes.

"What about Mississippi State, one of the best teams in the country? What about Duquesne and Georgetown, who are both strong? What about Auburn? And you can watch Ray Morrison at Temple this fall."

These are missiles that are hard to dodge. Both Georgetown and Duquesne have been on a high upper level for the last two years. They will be hard to roll back this season.

I happen to know that Mississippi State will be something to beat all fall.

Any coach from the deep south will tell you that.

The trouble is that with over 100 high class college teams, possibly 200 such teams, there isn't time enough or space enough to cover the long patrol.

As every one knows there are certain publicized highways in football — Notre Dame, Ohio State, Southern California, Michigan, Minnesota, the Ivy League, Duke, Tennessee, Georgia Tech, Tulane, Pitt, the Texas round-up, Nebraska —almost any big conference team— and these include only fifteen or twenty percent of the country's total.

There may be outside teams just as strong, often stronger, than the teams which get the headlines — Villanova, Georgetown, Detroit, Duquesne, Miss. State, Boston College, Holy Cross, Fordham, Marquette, Santa Clara, etc.

Their national publicity weakness is due to the fact that most of them don't happen to be part of any conference — east, west, south or north. Or it may be that most of them can't get on the publicized schedules.

It is easy enough to understand the hurt feeling of some team's supporter when his favorite campus is overlooked.

But the new football schedules show around 400 teams in action and who can follow the fortunes of 400 teams in a two month span? The Conference teams all have the headline jump, barring Notre Dame, which heads the pack on its own. In this respect Notre Dame is unique, the biggest single attendance card and intersectional interest in football.—North American Newspaper Alliance.

Pennant Race At a Glance

By The Associated Press

The American League was in a dead heat today as the Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers hit the home stretch for the first of six games they must play against each other before the season ends.

Detroit's sluggers pounded the Philadelphia Athletics mercilessly yesterday (Thursday) to take two games, 13-2, and 10-1, and move into a tie for the lead with Cleveland, which topped the Washington Senators, 3-1.

The New York Yankees shoved the Chicago White Sox virtually out of the pennant picture and kept themselves within four games of the lead on a 10-1 victory.

The standings:

Club	Won	Lost	Pct.	GB.	TP.
Cleveland	85	61	.582	—	8
Detroit	85	61	.582	—	8
New York	80	64	.556	4	10
Chicago	79	67	.541	6	8

Navy Coach Is Concentrating On Precision

Expects To "Polish Up" Grid Machine for Opening Game

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 19 (AP)—Maj. Emery (Swede) Larson, Navy's head coach, began concentrating today on precision in the execution of plays and on details of deception as the Middies passed their halfway training mark.

From now until the season opener Sept. 28 with William and Mary college Larson said he would "polish up" the Tar machine, with just enough scrimmages to keep the squad in top-form.

Barring injuries, Larson said he expected to have an eleven at least as strong as the 1939 unit.

The past two days of scrimmage against Rutgers university boosted the number of casualties to eight. Three Middies were injured yesterday—Capt. Dick Foster, left end, sprained his ankle; Phil Gutting, regular back, was kicked in the side, and George Ringenberg, a sophomore center recently converted to guard, hurt his shoulder.

Others on the casualty list are Clif Lenz, Bill Chip, Zeke Zechella and Bob Leonard, backs, and Bob Froude, an end. Froude, a junior and a letterman, probably will be out for the season with a torn leg muscle.

Zechella, a promising sophomore, hurt his ankle and won't be ready for the William and Mary game, Larson said. Leonard, who injured his left knee this summer, will be used only as a "pinch hitter" this fall. He will ply his trade as an expert placement kicker.

Lenz and Chip, who have been resting, are expected to be ready by Sept. 28 and Larson hopes Foster, Gutting and Ringenberg will have recuperated by that time.

Foster's place was taken today by Bob Zoeller, a 1939 Plebe, one half of the "touchdown twins". His sidekick, triple-threat Bill Busik, teamed up with him last year on the Plebe eleven.

The two-hour practice session today was devoted to fundamental and pass defense drills. Practically no heavy work was done, principally because scrimmages will be held with Georgetown university here Saturday.

Pitt Is Working Hard for Game With Ohio State

Most of First Team Positions Seem To Be Definitely Settled

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 19 — The situation by positions as the Pitt Panthers swing into the middle of their second week of practice—and with the Ohio State game at Columbus now less than two weeks away.

At left end Stan Gervelis is on the sidelines with a leg injury. In his place is Al Gurczenski, a third string tackle last fall. There is a possibility that Joe Rettinger, who is being worked at both sides of the line, may come back to his old post at left. John Stahl, with late-season experience last fall, is trailing Gurczenski at present.

Sinco Wins Center Post

Steve Sinco is secure at center, the big 210 pounder, always being good defensively, and this fall his passing has been all that could be asked.

Ralph Fife, speedy guard, has a chance to work his way into the ranks of Pitt greats. Over ten pounds heavier than last fall, he is more rugged, and has kept his charge of mobility.

Jack Benz at right tackle is due to start against Ohio. Smart defensively and big, he holds a slight edge over Bill Benghouser, 220 pound junior who has no game experience.

Joe Rettinger can keep his right end job, unless shifted to left again. Should this happen Jack Goodridge, a fine spot man, will complete the line. This shift would mean a drop in weight but an increase in speed.

Sekela at Quarterback

At quarterback Mike Sekela, understudy to Ben Kish last fall, has the call. He gives Pitt a 195 pound blocking back.

Left half will go to Edgar Jones, who has been doing a good job thus far, and gives Pitt a passer and runner in the tailback spot.

Bobby Thurbon, 168 pound speedster, will be at right half. He has two years experience and a pair of sticky fingers when it comes to grabbing passes.

George Kracum, 200 pounds of reformed halfback, will be at fullback. He provides passing strength, ball-carrying, and defensive height.

Sadowsky Is Assisting Coach Charlie Havens

WESTMINSTER, Md., Sept. 19 (AP)—Coach Charlie Havens got some expert help today for his Western Maryland football team when Al Sadowsky, former All-State W. M. tackle, showed up to aid in line drill.

Sadowsky, one of the best tackles in Western Maryland's history, worked at length with the line candidates and concentrated on the play of the tackles.

Intensive drill on fundamentals featured the hour and a half session this afternoon. Pass defense was stressed particularly.

With the exception of Fridel, a guard out with an arm injury, and Bill Walls, a tackle who has not yet returned to school because of illness, the squad is complete.

Shifted to Fullback

Because he is short of fullbacks Coach Jack Hegerty has shifted Bill McLaughlin, last year a triple threat halfback on Georgetown University's freshman eleven to a fullback. McLaughlin is a 195 pound husky with plenty of drive.

Large Squad Is Out at Romney

Romney, W. Va., Sept. 19—Football prospects are bright at Romney High School, Coach Bob Kyle reporting today that his squad of 38 boys is the largest in four years.

There is also quality with 23 holdovers from last year including nine lettermen. Those who won letters in 1939 and who are back in the fold are Paul Harmison, Frank Lewis, Harwell Thompson, Loudon Thompson, Raymond McDonald, James Wagoner, James Alkire, George Heavner and Bill Milleson.

Others with experience are Michael Cannon, Lyle Sneather, Madison Combs, Ivan Shanholtz, John Sietors, Randolph Ewers, Paul Ganoe, Charles Parsons, Robert Singhass, Charles Oates, Max McKee, Bill Michael, Buford Saville and Romanus Fisher.

Romney had been scheduled to open next Friday against Capon Bridge but the latter school notified Coach Kyle that it would have only six-man football this year.

Coach Kyle hopes to fill the open date but if he is unsuccessful, the locals will swing into action October 4 against Charles Town here. The schedule:

Sept. 27—Open.
Oct. 4—Charles Town, home.
Oct. 11—Franklin, away.
Oct. 18—Moorefield, home.
Oct. 25—Petersburg, away.
Nov. 1—Keyser, home.
Nov. 8—Ridgeley, away.
Nov. 15—Berkeley Springs, away.

Outdoor Club Will Open Its Bowling Season Here Tonight

The fourth bowling season for the Cumberland Outdoor Club will open tonight at 9 o'clock at the Roxy with six teams competing in the league.

The teams are the Blue Jays, Jay Birds, Bobwhites, Sparrows, Eagles and Catbirds. A split season schedule has been adopted with the first half ending December 27 and the last half closing April 9. Prizes will be awarded at the end of the grind.

Members eligible to roll are S. Aldridge, J. Dick, D. Stegmaier, E. Bittner, C. Gehauf, F. Hamilton, G. Lynn, K. Racey, H. Bolinger, R. Atwell, J. Stevenson, J. McGeady, R. Lester, W. Hartman, L. Driscoll, W. Sellers, E. Belfoure, C. Minnicks, R. Cosgrove, D. Lester, J. Durrett, P. Geiner, W. Linaburg, E. McConnell, W. Kayser, E. Melvin, E. Mower, E. Keyser, W. Lantz, J. Hopcraft, E. Wolfe, E. Reid, F. Baldwin, H. Trieber, C. Rodenhouser, B. Gehauf, T. Thompson, C. Simpson, R. Durrett and W. Bolinger.

Young Assistants

Potomac State Eleven To Open Season Saturday

Catamounts Will Play First Game with Morris-Harvey College

KEYSER, W. Va., Sept. 19—The Potomac State football squad, consisting of 26 players and Coach Dana Lough, will invade Charleston Saturday to open the 1940 campaign in a night battle with the Morris Harvey eleven.

The Catamounts are in their second week of practice and have rounded into fairly good physical condition. Delmar Burns, substitute guard last year, and Joseph Emch, a newcomer who also plays guard, are on the injury list.

There are only six holdovers from last year with Virgil Barr, Bill Starford and Bob Kight the only first—stringers to return. Barr, 210 pounds, hails from Parsons; Starford, an 186-pounder, is from Grafton, while Kight, 145 pounds, is a local boy. Barr is a lineman, Starford an end and Kight a back.

Squad Inexperienced

The other veterans are Ken Bolyard, a lineman from Grafton; Burns, a lineman from Keyser, and Haines Jones, another lineman from West Union.

Nine Games Scheduled

Linemen—George Mullett, New Martinsville; Thomas Pownall, Moorefield; John Manchion, Farmington; Jack O'Neill, New Martinsville; Carroll Rowe, Winchester, Va.

Backs—Eugene Brown, Piedmont; John Stewart, Lumberport; Carl Shanor, Pittsburgh; Ray Long, Romney; Paul Miller, Pittsburgh; Jack Bolyard, Kingwood, and Lloyd Reese, New Philadelphia.

Nine games have been scheduled including a night battle with St. Francis at Cumberland October 12. Three of the contests are scheduled here including the homecoming battle with Shepherd November 9. The schedule follows:

Sept. 21—Morris Harvey at Charleston.
Sept. 28—Blue Ridge at Keyser.
Oct. 5—Waynesburg at Waynesburg.
Oct. 12—St. Francis at Cumberland.
Oct. 19—Mt. St. Mary's at Emmitsburg.
Oct. 26—Glenville at Keyser.
Nov. 2—Concord at Athens.
Nov. 9—Shepherd at Keyser.
Nov. 16—West Liberty at West Liberty.

Yale Grid Team Looks Good for 1940 Season

Players Predict They Will Win all Eight Games on Schedule

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 19 (AP) — On the say so of the varsity players, who should know, the Yale football team is in for its "best season in years."

Captain Hal Whiteman, hard-hitting batter, and Ray Anderson, a mighty smart quarterback, even go so far as to predict an undefeated campaign. Head Coach Ducky Pond likes to hear such talk but he isn't quite so enthusiastic.

Yet, a neutral visitor, watching the big blue squad go through a gruelling workout, can't help but be impressed with the potential power and exuberance on display.

For example, take the team that Pond says looks like his starters—Captain Whiteman from Nashville, Anderson, Hovey Seymour and Ted Harrison in the backfield; Alan Bartholemy, of Portland, Ore., and Jack Thompson from Minneapolis, the ends; Bob Brooke of Milwaukee and Bill Knapp of Rye, N. C., at tackle; Cape Burnam of Richmond, Ky., and Jim Dern of Fort Wayne, Ind., at guard and Ted Turner at Center.

What do they think?

"We're going to win all eight games," agree Whiteman and Anderson. "Why shouldn't we? The spirit is great, the team looks well-balanced and experienced as a group."

Reserves — good ones that is — always have been a bugaboo at Yale, and this season is hardly an exception. But there are quite a few above average, like Jim Potts, the sophomore blocking back; Spencer Moseley, last year's freshman center; Howie Kaye, kicking specialist; and several good solid linemen.

After Virginia on Oct. 5, the Elis run into Penn, Dartmouth and Navy in order. Then comes Brown, followed by Cornell, Princeton and Harvard.

Games Postponed

The Trozzo-Liberty Dairy games scheduled for today and tomorrow in South Cumberland, have been postponed until Monday and Tuesday of next week.

Recalls Other Close Races Cleveland-Detroit Series

By JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, Sept. 19 — The first of two sudden-death series between Cleveland and Detroit is about to come up in the American League. Three games. Mr. John T. Doyle, the baffled handicapper, who is changing his odds every hour this month, wishes he knew today what he will know Sunday.

"They are driving me nuts," said Mr. Doyle to your correspondent, looking up with glazed eyes from a pile of figures as tall as a yearling calf. "The best I can tell you now is, 4 to 5 on either club for the pennant. Cleveland, 4 to 5. Detroit, 4 to 5. Sunday night, one of them will be the favorite. Right now, it's tighter than my collar."

"How about the Yankees?" said your agent.

"Ten to one," said Mr. Doyle.

"How about the White Sox?"

"Ten to one," snapped Mr. Doyle "And Boston fifteen to one. Say, friend, you have to go back a long way to find a scramble like this in the American League."

Breathless Race in 1922

The figures on Mr. Doyle's table showed just how far back you have to go. For a three-club race, no holds barred, you have to go back to 1920. For a four-club shambles, 1908. And for any kind of a race in the American League at all, you have to burrow down twelve years to the season of 1928, when the Yankees finished two and one-half games ahead of the Athletics after Connie Mack had pulled alongside in September and looked the winners in the eye.

It was close in 1924 — Washington over New York by two. It was breathless in 1922 — New York over St. Louis by one. In 1920 they finished like this:

Cleveland by two.
Chicago by one.
New York.

That season, of course, was a freak, and may not fairly belong in the reckoning. Early in September the news of the gambling scandal of 1919 broke with a low boom. Chicago's star players were suspended pending investigation. The Sox might otherwise have won the pennant.

In 1916 they had a tight one — Boston, Chicago, and Detroit finishing in that order, with four games separating first place and third. In 1915, Boston beat out Detroit by two and one-half games. In some cases, to be sure, the figures do not tell the story, for the winning team lagged after clinching the pennant.

"For real races," said Mr. Doyle, beginning to relax from his case of pencil nerves, "give me 1906-7-8. In those days, the American League got a copyright on the stuff the National League has been using lately. It was one dogfight after another."

In 1906, Cleveland and New York seemed to have it between them as they entered the stretch, with Chicago pattering along somewhat astern. But that Chicago team was Fielder Jones's hitless wonders — Jiggs Donohue, George Rohe, George Davis, Billy Sullivan, The Fielder himself, and three great pitchers, Walsh, White, and Altrock. They rolled from behind to win it by three games, with the highlanders of New York nosing out Cleveland by one.

Detroit Had the Dice

"They had a pip in 1907, too, the following year," muttered Mr. Doyle. "Two new teams came along and beat the brains out of everybody else — Detroit and the Athletics. Between 'em, Detroit and the A's won every pennant for the next five years. The time I'm talking about, Detroit had the dice.

"They came into Philadelphia for a four-game series, and Hughie Jennings told me they'd have to take three out of four to cop the pennant. Well, Ty Cobb jumped into the left-field crowd to pull down a fly that sent the game to fourteen innings. Detroit winning. The payoff came in a doubleheader. Mack had Bender and Plank ready to go, but Plank had to relieve Bender in the first game, and when Detroit won that one, they were in."

In 1908, the finish speaks for itself:

	Won	Lost
Detroit	90	63
Cleveland	90	64
Chicago	88	64
St. Louis	83	69

Six and one-half games between first and fourth place at the wire—and Detroit over Cleveland by half a game. I do not wish to step into any traps, but there may be a clue there to the deep, dark mystery of 1940.

Detroit Wallops Mack's Athletics In Doubleheader

Tigers Earn Tie with Cleveland by Capturing Both Games

By DALE STAFFORD

DETROIT, Sept. 19 (AP) — The fence-wrecking Detroit Tigers bombarded the Philadelphia Athletics into humble submission, 13 to 2 and 10 to 1, in a doubleheader today, thereby climbing into a first place tie with the Cleveland Indians.

The Bengals and the Indians open a "promoter's dream" three game series here tomorrow with the American League pennant probably hinging on the outcome.

The Tigers got brilliant pitching from two unexpected quarters and tremendous slugging by their home run twins—Hank Greenberg and Rudy York—in their one-sided victories.

Greenberg and York both homered in the first game and each slugger drove in five runs. York hit for the circuit in the nightcap and batted in three runs while Greenberg was sending one runner over the plate with a double. Greenberg scored a total of seven runs, four in the opener and three in the nightcap.

Rookies Pitch Well

The surprise pitching came from Floyd Giebell, a lanky blond up from Buffalo where he won 15 games and lost 16, and Paul Trout, the No. 1 disappointment of the Tiger pitching corps this season. Giebell scattered eight hits in the opener as he won his first American League start of the year. Trout turned in a superb four-hit performance in the second contest.

Oddly enough, all of the Philadelphia runs came on homers, Sam Chapman and Bob Johnson hitting for the circuit in the first game and Dee Miles connecting for a four-base blow in the finale.

A crowd of 10,493 watched the games.

The Tigers combed Lovill (Chubby) Dean for 14 hits and 28 bases in the first game which was decided in the third when Greenberg hit his thirty-ninth homer of the year and his thirteenth in sixteen games with one on base.

York's thirty-first homer sparked a three-run assault in the fifth and Greenberg's three-bagger with the bases full highlighted a four tally outburst in the sixth.

Tigers Hit Hard

The Tigers backed Trout's fine pitching with a 13 hit-23 base attack in the nightcap. York got Detroit enough runs to win in the second inning when he hit for the circuit after Greenberg had walked.

The homers in each tilt enabled the Tigers to extend to 17 contests their new major league record of consecutive games in which the club has had at least one four base clout.

By scoring seven runs today Greenberg took the lead from Ted Williams, of the Boston Red Sox, in runs scored in the American League with a total of 126. He leads the league in runs batted in with 145, is tops in doubles with 49 and is ahead in homers with 39.

Potomac State Eleven To Open Season Saturday

Catamounts Will Play First Game with Morris-Harvey College

KEYSER, W. Va., Sept. 19—The Potomac State football squad, consisting of 26 players and Coach Dana Lough, will invade Charleston Saturday to open the 1940 campaign in a night battle with the Morris Harvey eleven.

The Catamounts are in their second week of practice and have rounded into fairly good physical condition. Delmar Burns, substitute guard last year, and Joseph Emch, a newcomer who also plays guard, are on the injury list.

There are only six holdovers from last year with Virgil Barr, Bill Starford and Bob Kight the only first—stringers to return. Barr, 210 pounds, hails from Parsons; Starford, an 186-pounder, is from Grafton, while Kight, 145 pounds, is a local boy. Barr is a lineman, Starford an end and Kight a back.

Squad Inexperienced

The other veterans are Ken Bolyard, a lineman from Grafton; Burns, a lineman from Keyser, and Haines Jones, another lineman from West Union.

Nine Games Scheduled

Linemen—George Mullett, New Martinsville; Thomas Pownall, Moorefield; John Manchion, Farmington; Jack O'Neill, New Martinsville; Carroll Rowe, Winchester, Va.

Backs—Eugene Brown, Piedmont; John Stewart, Lumberport; Carl Shanor, Pittsburgh; Ray Long, Romney; Paul Miller, Pittsburgh; Jack Bolyard, Kingwood, and Lloyd Reese, New Philadelphia.

Nine games have been scheduled including a night battle with St. Francis at Cumberland October 12. Three of the contests are scheduled here including the homecoming battle with Shepherd November 9. The schedule follows:

Sept. 21—Morris Harvey at Charleston.
Sept. 28—Blue Ridge at Keyser.
Oct. 5—Waynesburg at Waynesburg.
Oct. 12—St. Francis at Cumberland.
Oct. 19—Mt. St. Mary's at Emmitsburg.
Oct. 26—Glenville at Keyser.
Nov. 2—Concord at Athens.
Nov. 9—Shepherd at Keyser.
Nov. 16—West Liberty at West Liberty.

Yale Grid Team Looks Good for 1940 Season

Players Predict They Will Win all Eight Games on Schedule

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 19 (AP) — On the say so of the varsity players, who should know, the Yale football team is in for its "best season in years."

Captain Hal Whiteman, hard-hitting batter, and Ray Anderson, a mighty smart quarterback, even go so far as to predict an undefeated campaign. Head Coach Ducky Pond likes to hear such talk but he isn't quite so enthusiastic.

Yet, a neutral visitor, watching the big blue squad go through a gruelling workout, can't help but be impressed with the potential power and exuberance on display.

For example, take the team that Pond says looks like his starters—Captain Whiteman from Nashville, Anderson, Hovey Seymour and Ted Harrison in the backfield; Alan Bartholemy, of Portland, Ore., and Jack Thompson from Minneapolis, the ends; Bob Brooke of Milwaukee and Bill Knapp of Rye, N. C., at tackle; Cape Burnam of Richmond, Ky., and Jim Dern of Fort Wayne, Ind., at guard and Ted Turner at Center.

What do they think?

"We're going to win all eight games," agree Whiteman and Anderson. "Why shouldn't we? The spirit is great, the team looks well-balanced and experienced as a group."

Reserves — good ones that is — always have been a bugaboo at Yale, and this season is hardly an exception. But there are quite a few above average, like Jim Potts, the sophomore blocking back; Spencer Moseley, last year's freshman center; Howie Kaye, kicking specialist; and several good solid linemen.

After Virginia on Oct. 5, the Elis run into Penn, Dartmouth and Navy in order. Then comes Brown, followed by Cornell, Princeton and Harvard.

Games Postponed

The Trozzo-Liberty Dairy games scheduled for today and tomorrow in South Cumberland have been postponed until Monday and Tuesday of next week.

Recalls Other Close Races Cleveland-Detroit Series

By JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, Sept. 19 — The first of two sudden-death series between Cleveland and Detroit is about to come up in the American League. Three games. Mr. John T. Doyle, the baffled handicapper, who is changing his odds every hour this month, wishes he knew today what he will know Sunday.

"They are driving me nuts," said Mr. Doyle to your correspondent, looking up with glazed eyes from a pile of figures as tall as a yearling calf. "The best I can tell you now is, 4 to 5 on either club for the pennant. Cleveland, 4 to 5. Detroit, 4 to 5. Sunday night, one of them will be the favorite. Right now, it's tighter than my collar."

"How about the Yankees?" said your agent.

"Ten to one," said Mr. Doyle.

"How about the White Sox?"

"Ten to one," snapped Mr. Doyle. "And Boston fifteen to one. Say, friend, you have to go back a long way to find a scramble like this in the American League."

Breathless Race in 1922

The figures on Mr. Doyle's table showed just how far back you have to go. For a three-club race, no holds barred, you have to go back to 1920. For a four-club shambles, 1908. And for any kind of a race in the American League at all, you have to burrow down twelve years to the season of 1928, when the Yankees finished two and one-half games ahead of the Athletics after Connie Mack had pulled alongside in September and looked the winners in the eye.

It was close in 1924 — Washington over New York by two. It was breathless in 1922 — New York over St. Louis by one. In 1920 they finished like this:

Cleveland by two.
Chicago by one.
New York.

That season, of course, was a freak, and may not fairly belong in the reckoning. Early in September the news of the gambling scandal of 1919 broke with a low boom. Chicago's star players were suspended pending investigation. The Sox might otherwise have won the pennant.

In 1916 they had a tight one — Boston, Chicago, and Detroit finishing in that order, with four games separating first place and third. In 1915, Boston beat out Detroit by two and one-half games. In some cases, to be sure, the figures do not tell the story, for the winning team lagged after clinching the pennant.

"For real races," said Mr. Doyle, beginning to relax from his case of pencil nerves, "give me 1906-7-8. In those days, the American League got a copyright on the stuff the National League has been using lately. It was one dogfight after another."

In 1906, Cleveland and New York seemed to have it between them as they entered the stretch, with Chicago pattering along somewhat astern. But that Chicago team was Fielder Jones's hitless wonders — Jiggs Donohue, George Rohe, George Davis, Billy Sullivan, The Fielder himself, and three great pitchers, Walsh, White, and Altrock. They rolled from behind to win it by three games, with the highlanders of New York nosing out Cleveland by one.

Detroit Had the Dice

"They had a pip in 1907, too, the following year," muttered Mr. Doyle. "Two new teams came along and beat the brains out of everybody else — Detroit and the Athletics. Between 'em, Detroit and the A's won every pennant for the next five years. The time I'm talking about, Detroit had the dice.

"They came into Philadelphia for a four-game series, and Hughie Jennings told me they'd have to take three out of four to cop the pennant. Well, Ty Cobb jumped into the left-field crowd to pull down a fly that sent the game to fourteen innings. Detroit winning. The payoff came in a doubleheader. Mack had Bender and Plank ready to go, but Plank had to relieve Bender in the first game, and when Detroit won that one, they were in."

In 1908, the finish speaks for itself:

	Won	Lost
Detroit	90	63
Cleveland	90	64
Chicago	88	64
St. Louis	83	69

Six and one-half games between first and fourth place at the wire—and Detroit over Cleveland by half a game. I do not wish to step into any traps, but there may be a clue there to the deep, dark mystery of 1940.

Detroit Wallops Mack's Athletics In Doubleheader

By DALE STAFFORD

DETROIT, Sept. 19 (AP) — The fence-wrecking Detroit Tigers bombarded the Philadelphia Athletics into humble submission, 13 to 2 and 10 to 1, in a doubleheader today, thereby climbing into a first place tie with the Cleveland Indians.

The Bengals and the Indians open a "promoter's dream" three game series here tomorrow with the American League pennant probably hinging on the outcome.

The Tigers got brilliant pitching from two unexpected quarters and tremendous slugging by their home run twins—Hank Greenberg and Rudy York—in their one-sided victories.

Greenberg and York both homered in the first game and each slugger drove in five runs. York hit for the circuit in the nightcap and batted in three runs while Greenberg was sending one runner over the plate with a double. Greenberg scored a total of seven runs, four in the opener and three in the nightcap.

Rookies Pitch Well

The surprise pitching came from Floyd Giebell, a lanky blond up from Buffalo where he won 15 games and lost 16, and Paul Trout, the No. 1 disappointment of the Tiger pitching corps this season. Giebell scattered eight hits in the opener as he won his first American League start of the year. Trout turned in a superb four-hit performance in the second contest.

Oddly enough, all of the Philadelphia runs came on homers, Sam Chapman and Bob Johnson hitting for the circuit in the first game and Dee Miles connecting for a four-base blow in the finale.

A crowd of 10,493 watched the games.

The Tigers combed Lovill (Chubby) Dean for 14 hits and 28 bases in the first game which was decided in the third when Greenberg hit his thirty-ninth homer of the year and his thirteenth in sixteen games with one on base.

York's thirty-first homer sparked a three-run assault in the fifth and Greenberg's three-bagger with the bases full highlighted a four tally outburst in the sixth.

Tigers Hit Hard

The Tigers backed Trout's fine pitching with a 13 hit-23 base attack in the nightcap. York got Detroit enough runs to win in the second inning when he hit for the circuit after Greenberg had walked.

The homers in each tilt enabled the Tigers to extend to 17 contests their new major league record of consecutive games in which the club has had at least one four base clout.

By scoring seven runs today Greenberg took the lead from Ted Williams, of the Boston Red Sox, in runs scored in the American League with a total of 126. He leads the league in runs batted in with 145, is tops in doubles with 49 and is ahead in homers with 39.

SPORTS TRAIL

WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, Sept. 19 — Jock Sutherland has survived his debut as pro football coach with only minor abrasions of his dignity, and aside from a stout suspicion that the pro league is made up of a lot of little holding companied, interlocking grip on a defensive takles' leg, he has no criticism to offer of the money game.

"They hold," says the axpatriated Pittsburgh tutor plaintively, "I saw some of my Brooklyn boys holding last Sunday and I asked them why they did it. They just said: 'everybody else does.'

"That's bad, and it's up to the coaches to stop it .Maybe the officials are a little more lax on that, but these pro boys are slick, and it's hard to catch them.

"In college, a 15-yard holding penalty is a most despairing thing to a coach. It's so hard to get those yards. 'No holding, now, I'd always tell my players just before they went on the field The pro coaches should do something about it. With holding materially curbed we then would have a great game and a wonderful spectacle."

As a whole, Sutherland views the transition from campus to professional football as slight.

"The problems are the same," he says. "I find the pros just as keen to win as the college boys. They want to be as good as possible, for financial reasons if no other, and they listen carefully to instruction. And they can concentrate on the game. They don't have classes and study periods on their minds."

Oddly enough, thep ros with all their football lore are in some cases easier to fool with trick plays than the college boys, Sutherland says. It's just a case of knowing how much, playing a mechanical game.

"The experienced player is all set for orthodox plays," he said, "and he sometimes gets himself into peculiar positions so you can trap him. An experienced player doesn't fall as easily for the decoy and the threat and the feint because he's just out there playing defensive football Those boys are hard to set up for the kill."

Sutherland says he moved a good deal of his Pittsburgh system to Brooklyn, changing it as necessary.

"After all," he remarks, "after you've been in this game as long as I have you can't change over night. I think any defensive team playing against us which knows the Pitt system will recognize it."

He considers Don Hutson of Green Bay the greatest pass receiver football has known, but Jock still thinks the tall packer can be stopped.

"There never was a player or a team for which defense couldn't be built," he declared emphatically.

"The pros scout each other quite thoroughly. The teams are always changing plays. Our trouble at Brooklyn might now is that we haven't had time to develop enough plays to match the opposition."

And so far the Dodgers haven't developed enough opposition to match the plays. But just give the doctor time

Bad Faith Charged By Union Head; Hits Agitators

Calls Statement Attributed To Carner "Deliberate Falsehood"

James A. Dundon, president of Local 1874, last night labeled a full page newspaper statement of the Celanese Corporation as a "masterpiece of misstatement and subterfuge, full of inconsistencies and a prime example of the corporation's bad faith and its unwillingness or inability to keep within the rules of the game."

Dundon charged that the statement attributed by the company to Shelton Carner, union committeeman, that the plant would be shut down unless certain disciplinary action was revoked as a "deliberate falsehood."

Dundon charged that "all during the negotiations for a renewal of our agreement, company officials and members of the company staff attempted to foment trouble and distrust by singling out individual members of the union's committee and spreading false and malicious propaganda about them among the workers in the plant."

Tried to Break Morale

"The sole intent of that procedure was to break the morale of the union by breaking the people's faith and trust in their leaders," Dundon said.

"This is supposed to be a modern era in which the laws of the United States recognize the equality of labor and management in collective bargaining," the union president continued." All during our nine months of negotiations under the most difficult circumstances we have bargained in good faith. We have been moderate in our demands and temperate in our negotiations. We have utilized peaceful bargaining to the limit. The workers in the plant and the general community are well aware of this fact. We have not resorted to any underhand tricks to get an advantage over the management.

"I charge," Dundon continued, "that the attempts of the management to sow discord and distrust during the negotiations, and a continuation of those attempts as evidenced in the newspaper statement, is unworthy of men who claim the respect of the public."

Discipline Discussed

Commenting on discipline, Dundon said that the "plant superintendent admitted to us that certain members of his staff have not cooperated in maintaining harmonious relations between the workers and the management. He admitted that mmbers of the staff are poorly trained, incompetent and not at all to be desired. He admitted to us that they had deliberately attempted to cause distrust and disharmony among the workers. We know that they deliberately and maliciously spread lies. In spite of all this, however, the plant superintendent refused to discipline those members of the staff when we asked that he take action against them."

"Discipline, like charity, should begin at home" Dundon continued. "If the management is so anxious for discipline why did it not take corrective measures against the prime offenders? Why did it not discipline those who are solely responsible for the present turn of events. If the company had listened to our pleas that those who were causing discord and distrust should be warned or punished, there would be no controversy today.

Victims Punished

"But this company, following its usual pattern, wants to let those trouble makers closest to its heart go free and to punish their innicent victims. We can assume, therefore, that management condones or even supports these acts of provocation on the part of its staff members. Until the management can put its own internal house in order, let it make no charges of lack of discipline against the union."

Dundon lashed out at special police who he declared "had acted with no more discretion than uniformed thugs," declared the management "informed us that it would fire the victims of the violence but would take absolutely no action against the police who caused it."

"I give you proof that the management was not acting in good faith," Dundon said, "because it continually refused to tell us what disciplinary action it contemplated and how many workers would be involved. I told you that we had been assured by the New York officials of the corporation that the local plant management would be lenient and cooperative in putting the new contract into effect without any hitches.

Company Has Crust

Summing up his observations in regard to the incident a week ago Monday night, Dundon said, "in spite of the fact that the corporation is fully aware of the type of men it harbors, it has the crust to talk about discipline in a public statement.

Turning to the question of arbitration, Dundon stated that "seven times the union agreed to arbitrate not one, but every point, in the negotiations upon which we could not agree. Seven times the management absolutely refused to arbitrate anything. The officials of the United States Department of Labor, government conciliators and every member of the negotiating committee can attest to the union's willingness to arbitrate. We were willing to take our chances with arbitration rather than cause a rift and strike. As often as we proposed arbitration, the company refused it.

"Make no mistake about it. The management had no intention of compromising with the union on the discharge cases which finally

Negotiations over Celanese Plant Dispute Seem To Be at Standstill

While the "battle of statements" continued to rage yesterday on the Celanese front, really nothing of actual importance developed.

All eyes were focused yesterday on Aaron Horvitz, United States conciliator, and John N. Pohlhaus, state labor commissioner, who have become the key figures at the moment by virtue of the fact that they shouldered the responsibility of bringing the participants in the case together.

However, neither had anything concrete in the way of information to offer last night.

Cumberland citizens, stunned earlier in the week by fast-breaking developments at the plant that culminated in a shutdown Tuesday night had begun to discuss the situation everywhere yesterday in restaurants, office buildings and on downtown city streets.

Many people, who were satisfied that the case had been happily settled to the satisfaction of all concerned, asked the question, "just what is the trouble about?"

The company's stand as evinced by yesterday's statement was simply that the union should sign the new contract, already ratified except for two grievances, and then arbitrate those grievances later.

Those grievances pertain to the discharge of two union employes who were injured in a disorder at the plant last week and the question of discipline.

The union stand has been that corporation has not played square in the matter of discipline and has not given members any guarantee that more unionists won't be suspended or discharged in the future.

Earlier in the week, union officials indicated that the corporation had agreed that there would be no discharge of employes as a result of activity since the expiration of the contract.

Last night, Union President Dundon stated that "we had been assured by the New York officials of the Corporation that the local plant management would be lenient and cooperative in putting the new contract into effect without any hitches."

However, the union contends that since the return from Washington the management has been vague and elusive regarding its intentions.

GOP Will Open Headquarters Here Monday

Room in Jammer Building at 47 Baltimore Street Is Secured

Announcement to this effect was made last evening by Lewis M. Wilson, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee for Allegany County.

Delay was caused in opening headquarters by unexpected prolongation of negotiations for a central site. It was originally planned to have a location on North Centre street, but changes in certain realty plans made it impossible to bring the refusal for it into effect.

Wilson also announced that a mammoth Willkie banner will be strung across Baltimore street within a few days. The cost of this campaign advertising is being borne by popular subscriptions of $1 each.

Wilson stated that party workers are enthusiastic over the prospects for the Willkie ticket in Cumberland and elsewhere in Allegany county. Many Jeffersonian type Democrats and independents are pledging support.

The county chairman also said that a vigorous campaign would be waged by the committee in the county up until election day.

Orr Countermands Order for Police To Work 12 Hours

Police Commissioner James Orr, yesterday countermanded the order issued by Acting Chief of Police, John J. Trieber, Wednesday placing the Cumberland Police Department on a twelve hour basis.

Orr took action immediately upon his return to the city from an official business trip to Columbus, Ohio. He said there was no trouble in the city and he saw no reason for having the officers to serve four hours more on each shift.

Trieber issued the order following the shutdown of the Celanese plant and it was to become effective yesterday morning at one a. m., but the police commissioner countermanded the order before the officers started on extra duty.

Gateway Chatter urges the citizens of Cumberland to turn out this evening for the "Safety Week" parade which will get under way at 6:30 o'clock.

Safety is naturally something in which all of us should be interested and the Western Maryland Automobile Club deserves a pat on the back for sponsoring "Safety Week" here.

An organization which should come in for a great deal of praise in connection with safety is the "Schoolboy Patrolmen." These youngsters, during the school term, are on the job before and after school to look after the safety of their fellow students.

Members of the patrol have flags stretched to long poles which they place across street intersections to stop traffic while school children cross in safety. Motorists should obey the signals of the patrolmen and be considerate of their work.

Remember it is better ta be late than sorry. Take time to protect yourself and others. Drive CAREFULLY.

How many Cumberlanders remember, way back in 1915-to 1924 how all of the kids in the neighborhood belonged to the "Lone Scouts?"

It was an organization founded by W. D. Boyce, a Chicago publisher, to give the country boy, or the kid in the smaller towns, the advantage of Scouting that would otherwise be denied them.

At the time referred to there were Lone Scout Tribes most everywhere, and through the medium of their official paper, "Lone Scout," the boys became acquainted with each other, and often made fast friends with members in other cities and states.

In 1924, for various reasons, the Lone Scout organization was absorbed by the Boy Scouts of America, and became the Rural Scout division of the Scouts. However, there was a group of Lone Scouts throughout the country who had learned to love the old organization and what it stood for entirely too well to stand idly by, and see it disappear.

In order to perpetuate it, they banded together into what is known as the EBEETIAN LEGION, and since 1927, this group of old friends has held high the banner of the Lone Indian.

This group has a large well illustrated monthly magazine, which is mailed monthly, no charge to each member. It is edited entirely by the members themselves, eleven months of the year The twelfth issue is edited by their wives and sweethearts, and is called the "Ladies' Number."

There are no dues, no officers and no laws in the Legion. Once a year, over the Labor day week-end, the members have a get-together or convention. The last affair was held in New York city, and at that time it was decided that the 1941 convention should be held in Hagerstown, Md. and is to be designated, "The Family Convention, Down in Dixie."

To become a member of this legion, it is only necessary to have been a member of the Lone Scouts in the "Good Old Days."

To Attend Meeting

Thomas F. Conlon leaves this morning for Baltimore to attend a meeting of the Maryland Veterans Commission, of which he is a member.

Two Damage Suits Docketed in Court Result of Crash

Claims Are Result of Accident on Route 40 in August; $3,500 Asked

Two damage suits asking a total of $3,500 were filed in circuit court yesterday by John A. and Elsie Seippel against G. H. Compton, of LaVale.

According to the petition docketed by Attorney Raymond Lewis Bainder, of Baltimore, Compton was responsible for an accident on Route 40 near Mayfield last August in which Mr. and Mrs. Seippel were both injured and their car damaged.

The petition states that the car driven by Seippel was proceeding in an easterly direction on Route 40 when it encountered the truck and trailer being operated by the defendant in a westerly direction.

The collision was due to the fact that the truck and trailer were on the wrong side of the highway, the petition claims, adding that the cause of the crash was due to the "negligence, carelessness and recklessness" of the defendant.

Mrs. Seippel, claiming $2,500 damages, claims she received face, arm, leg and body injuries and that her nervous system sustained a severe shock.

Seippel, who claims he had been operating his car in a careful and prudent manner, claims damages to his car amounted to $145.13 and that he received injuries on his body and limbs. He asks $1,000.

R. E. Atkinson Is Hurt in Accident

Suffers Lacerations and Bruises in Crash on Baltimore Avenue

Richard E. Atkinson, 20, of RFD 3 Cumberland, a Celanese employee, was injured last night on Baltimore avenue in an accident involving a motorcycle and two automobiles.

The motorcycle operated by Atkinson, traveling east, sideswiped the Cumberland-bound car of William Filsinger, of Eckhart, and then crashed against the rear of the parked machine of Fred R. Miller, 324 Baltimore avenue, according to police.

Atkinson suffered lacerations about the face, left arm and knee and bruises. He was taken to Allegany hospital by Thomas K. Dawson, 412 Goethe street, and admitted for observation.

Hospital attendants said he told them he lost control of the motorcycle when the front tire blew out. His condition was reported "good" late last night.

Officers Carl J. Stouffer and Walter P. Crabtree, who investigated, placed a charge of careless driving against Atkinson. No one else was injured in the mishap.

Winning Schoolboy Float Will Be In Parade Tonight

Everything is in readiness for the "Safety Week" parade which will be staged over downtown streets starting at 6:30 o'clock this evening.

The parade and a program at the State armory later are being sponsored by the Western Maryland Auto Club.

It was announced yesterday that student patrolmen of SS. Peter and Paul parochial school will have the float in the parade with which they won a prize in the national convention of schoolboy patrolmen at Washington, D. C., last year.

Demonstrations in practical methods of achieving safety will be put on by city police and members of the fire department at the program in the armory.

Business Group Gives Attention To War Plants

Traffic Congestion Problem and Other Subjects Are Discussed

Local war plants, traffic congestion relief, a community Hallowe'en celebration and development of a convention bureau were among numerous subjects discussed last night at the monthly meeting of the chamber of commerce directors.

Considerable material has been collected by chamber executives describing the vacant plants in Cumberland that might be utilized by the federal government for defense purposes. This is being filed with the quartermaster's division of the United States Army.

In connection therewith, the chamber has arranged to send representatives to a meeting on the subject to be held October 11 at Pittsburgh under auspices of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, of which the local chamber is an affiliate. Availability of plant sites and other plans concerning the development of war industries will be discussed at that time.

Two Traffic Relief Plans

Approval was given a survey in progress by the Traffic committee of the chamber looking to relief of the traffic congestion in the business center of the city.

One plan being worked on is a rerouting of traffic from eastward to westward through Pershing street. Another is the possibility of connecting Canal street with Wineow street as a means of routing traffic through the city from South Cumberland.

Two meetings have already been held with interested groups on the establishment of a convention bureau. John D. Liebau, president, has been asked to appoint a special committee to look into this further.

Meet This Evening

A special committee of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, representatives of the Mercantile Bureau of the chamber and a committee of the Junior Chamber of Commerce will meet at 8:30 o'clock this evening in the senior chamber headquarters to discuss plans for a community Hallowe'en celebration.

This would be held under the sponsorship of the Veterans of Foreign Wars with a big parade and a number of musical, costume and other contests for which cash prizes would be awarded. The idea is to attract groups from a wide area as contestants and to bring people here to witness the event.

Supervision Desired

Those back of this plan feel that a community celebration under proper supervision would not only be of interest to the people generally but would also serve to eliminate hoodlumism throughout the city on the occasion of this annual observance.

The directors authorized the attendance of the secretary at the annual meeting of the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries to be held October 20-23 at Boston.

Louis A. Falardeau, of the Maryland hotel, was elected to chamber membership upon recommendation of the Membership committee.

Eisenberg Estate Trustees File Case in Circuit Court

Carrie, Lorraine and Harold E. Eisenberg, trustees of the estate of Samuel Eisenberg, yesterday filed suit against Lawrence Peskin, trading as the Family Shoe Store.

According to the suit docketed by Attorney Edward J. Ryan the defendant promised to pay to the plaintiffs the sum of $400 as rent for the premises at 133 Baltimore street for the month of September and has neglected to do so.

Other considerations are enumerated in the petition.

Truck Drivers of Three Cumberland Companies Are Now Out on Strike

Truck drivers and helpers for three Cumberland companies were called out on strike yesterday morning by Local 453, of the Teamsters and Chauffeur's Union, an A. F. of L. affiliate.

C. E. Stutzman, union business agent, said a total of fifteen men stopped working at the Lear and Oliver Ice Cream Company, the the Appel Transfer.

The union agent declared contracts with Bennett and Appel expired August 31 and were extended for an indefinite period in the hope an agreement could be reached. The union has had no contract with Lear and Oliver but has been negotiating for sometime.

The main issue concerning Bennett and Appel, according to the union, is the refusal of the concerns to guarantee four hours work to a man or pay him for four hours when he is called out. The wage scale does not enter into the dispute. Stutzman declared the ice cream company has refused to sign a standard contract.

The Appel Transfer and Bennett Transfer stopped operations yesterday, Stutzman said.

The agent said the union allowed the Bennett firm to handle and ship all perishable goods, mostly meat, after the strike was called. Failure of the company to ship this perishable produce would have resulted in a severe loss, the agent declared.

However, the Lear and Oliver concern continued to operate yesterday, Stutzman said.

The union agents said the membership had not decided as yet whether it would apply for picket permits. The matter is now being considered, he said.

A spokesman for Lear and Oliver said trucks are operating but that a few men did not come to work. The Appel informant declared no trucks are operating and that it is "impossible to live up to the contract asked by the union."

Cannot Compete

Frank Bennett, temporary general manager of the Bennett company, said that his concern lived up to the old contract as much as possible but that the company cannot sign the contract demanded and compete with non-union truckers. He said the proposed contract contains new clauses although the union when presenting it, said it was the same as the old one.

Bennett said he offered to sign a 30 or 60-day contract in an effort to keep things moving. He said the union wants to limit the work week to 48 hours but that in rush periods longer hours must be worked at regular rates to meet competition. Bennett declared some competitors work men much longer periods for only $25 and $30 a week.

He also said the dispute is not over wages and that perishable goods are being moved.

Omitted Line Causes Premature Deaths

Through the omission of a line of copy, an article in the NEWS of yesterday unintentionally proclaimed the death of two prominent members of the local lodge of Elks, who say they are very much alive.

Correctly, a paragraph should have appeared as follows:

The NEWS regrets the error.

Lions Club Has Zone Meeting And Induction

Cumberland Adds Six New Members---Uniform Is Adopted in District

Six new members were inducted into the Cumberland Lions club at the Zone meeting and stag seafood dinner of Lions clubs last evening at the Ali Ghan Shrine club.

The new members of the club who are permitted to "change their diet from milk to meat and roar" are W. W. Mortzfeldt, William H. Keight, Edward Nevy, W. Lester Heinrich, W. E. German and William H. Blake. Paul E. Myers, membership chairman, introduced the newcomers to the club and Thomas Lohr Richards had charge of the induction ceremony in which the "Code of Ethics" of the Lions was read.

New Uniform Introduced

Attired in the uniform adopted by District 22, Hugh Keiser, of Washington, D. C., district governor of the Lions, gave a brief talk on the organization which he heads and stated that there are now 1,200 Lions in the district. He named John Park, of the Cumberland club, as uniform chairman, and said he hoped members of Lions clubs in this section would adopt the colorful uniform which he was sporting.

The complete uniform consists of blue coat, red sash, blue tie, tie band, Uncle Sam hat, Lion sleeve insignia and two District 22 lapel pins. An oversea cap may be substituted for an Uncle Sam hat.

The entertainment comprised tap dancing by James "Rochester" Meade, midget colored lad, and baritone horn selections by Joseph Trenton. Meade was accompanied at the piano by Caleb O'Connor, who served as first president of the Washington Lions club nineteen years ago, and Perry Rosenmerkle accompanied Trenton.

It was announced that the Lonaconing Lions club will hold its Charter Night celebration November 18.

Group Singing Features

Group singing was an added feature and among the songs that were sung were "Long, Long Trail, When You Wore a Tulip, Moonlight and Roses, Bells of St. Mary's" and as a grand finale "God Bless America."

Fifty-eight persons attended the stag affair.

Those present were:

Plant Gates Open For Employees, Company Declares

Corporation Calls Upon Union To Sign Contract, Arbitrate Grievances

The gates of the Celanese plant are open and employees who report for work on their regular shifts are being given employment, the management announced last night.

"Employees who are absenting themselves are doing so on their own decision, or on the advice of persons other than the management," the company announced.

As usual, following a shutdown, there is much work to be done. It will take at least three weeks to get the plant in full operation even after all departments reopen, it was reported.

Company Makes Reply

The vote by the union membership of Local 1874 not to return to work until the contract is signed brought a prompt reply from the corporation yesterday.

Informed of the union's action, the company promptly called upon Local 1874 to sign the contract as agreed to in Washington and to arbitrate grievances on discipline.

In reply to statements made by Union President James A. Dundon, the company emphatically denied that it had ever agreed to a general revocation of all disciplinary action in Washington. The company added that it has been, and is, willing to arbitrate grievances arising out of discharges or suspensions.

The complete text of the company's statement is as follows:

"The company is informed by this morning's press that the union has voted not to return to work until a satisfactory agreement is signed. The company is, and always has been, willing to sign the agreement which was settled in Washington and which was there approved by company representatives, by the president of TWUA, a vice president of TWUA, the president and secretary-treasurer and negotiating committee of the local union. This contract can be signed and made effective any time the union wants to carry out its part of the Washington agreement.

Offer Repeated

"The company has always been, and is, willing to arbitrate grievances arising out of discharges or suspensions. The offer to arbitrate was made to the union before the sit-down in the cellulose acetate department commenced on Tuesday, September 17th, and has been repeated thereafter.

"The policy of the company with reference to discipline has been clearly stated to the union both in Washington and in Cumberland. The statement that the company agreed to a withdrawal of all discharges or to a general amnesty is untrue. In Washington the company refused to agree to a general revocation of all disciplinary action. Thereafter the union representatives agreed to the contract which is now awaiting signature. In Cumberland in a conference with the personnel superintendent and the plant manager on Friday, September 13th, the union officers, the negotiating committee and a supplemental committee of several union members were again informed that the company would not grant the union's request that all disciplinary action be revoked and that there be no discipline imposed. The plant manager did, however, reduce five cases of discharge to suspensions for periods of 5 to 10 days.

Make Appointment

"Union officials on Tuesday afternoon made an appointment to see the personnel superintendent of the plant, who regularly handles grievances with them and who met them and offered arbitration. In the afternoon and during the early stages of the sit-down in the cellulose acetate department, the union officials did request that the plant manager attend the conference. The plant manager, through the personnel superintendent, demanded to know whether the union authorized the sit-down then in effect. The union officials refused to answer and thereafter refused to join a conference between the personnel superintendent and a committee of union employes from the cellulose acetate department.

"The acts for which discipline has been imposed include acts of violence in the ejection of employes who were properly at their work, assaults on and insubordination to supervisory officials as well as the acts resulting from a mass movement during working hours away from place of work in which the union president acknowledges that groups of workers left their work and marched in a body toward the warp knitting department.

"The union president was absent in Washington at the time and has only hearsay information and for that reason may have omitted to mention some other facts in connection with this rioting which include the fact that the marching body armed itself with sticks and that plant authorities promptly notified union hall, the state police and the sheriff of this county and withdrew the company police from the protection of the warp knitting department as soon as authorities arrived to preserve order.

"Obviously, if the workers had remained at their places of work they would not have come in contact with the police who were at a building approximately one-half mile from the place of work of most of the men.

"So far as the facts are in dispute and so far as the propriety of imposing discipline may be disputed,

Bad Faith Charged By Union Head; Hits Agitators

Calls Statement Attributed To Carner "Deliberate Falsehood"

James A. Dundon, president of Local 1874, last night labeled a full page newspaper statement of the Celanese Corporation as a "masterpiece of misstatement and subterfuge, full of inconsistencies and a prime example of the corporation's bad faith and its unwillingness or inability to keep within the rules of the game."

Dundon charged that the statement attributed by the company to Shelton Carner, union committeeman, that the plant would be shut down unless certain disciplinary action was revoked as a "deliberate falsehood."

Dundon charged that "all during the negotiations for a renewal of our agreement, company officials and members of the company staff attempted to foment trouble and distrust by singling out individual members of the union's committee and spreading false and malicious propaganda about them among the workers in the plant."

Tried to Break Morale

"The sole intent of that procedure was to break the morale of the union by breaking the people's faith and trust in their leaders," Dundon said.

"This is supposed to be a modern era in which the laws of the United States recognize the equality of labor and management in collective bargaining," the union president continued." All during our nine months of negotiations under the most difficult circumstances we have bargained in good faith. We have been moderate in our demands and temperate in our negotiations. We have utilized peaceful bargaining to the limit. The workers in the plant and the general community are well aware of this fact. We have not resorted to any underhand tricks to get an advantage over the management.

"I charge," Dundon continued, "that the attempts of the management to sow discord and distrust during the negotiations, and a continuation of those attempts as evidenced in the newspaper statement, is unworthy of men who claim the respect of the public."

Discipline Discussed

Commenting on discipline, Dundon said that the "plant superintendent admitted to us that certain members of his staff have not cooperated in maintaining harmonious relations between the workers and the management. He admitted that mmbers of the staff are poorly trained, incompetent and not at all to be desired. He admitted to us that they had deliberately attempted to cause distrust and disharmony among the workers. We know that they deliberately and maliciously spread lies. In spite of all this, however, the plant superintendent refused to discipline those members of the staff when we asked that he take action against them."

"Discipline, like charity, should begin at home" Dundon continued. "If the management is so anxious for discipline why did it not take corrective measures against the prime offenders? Why did it not discipline those who are solely responsible for the present turn of events. If the company had listened to our pleas that those who were causing discord and distrust should be warned or punished, there would be no controversy today.

Victims Punished

"But this company, following its usual pattern, wants to let those trouble makers closest to its heart go free and to punish their innicent victims. We can assume, therefore, that management condones or even supports these acts of provocation on the part of its staff members. Until the management can put its own internal house in order, let it make no charges of lack of discipline against the union."

Dundon lashed out at special police who he declared "had acted with no more discretion than uniformed thugs," declared the management "informed us that it would fire the victims of the violence but would take absolutely no action against the police who caused it."

"I give you proof that the management was not acting in good faith," Dundon said, "because it continually refused to tell us what disciplinary action it contemplated and how many workers would be involved. I told you that we had been assured by the New York officials of the corporation that the local plant management would be lenient and cooperative in putting the new contract into effect without any hitches.

Company Has Crust

Summing up his observations in regard to the incident a week ago Monday night, Dundon said, "in spite of the fact that the corporation is fully aware of the type of men it harbors, it has the crust to talk about discipline in a public statement.

Turning to the question of arbitration, Dundon stated that "seven times the union agreed to arbitrate not one, but every point, in the negotiations upon which we could not agree. Seven times the management absolutely refused to arbitrate anything. The officials of the United States Department of Labor, government conciliators and every member of the negotiating committee can attest to the union's willingness to arbitrate. We were willing to take our chances with arbitration rather than cause a rift and strike. As often as we proposed arbitration, the company refused it.

"Make no mistake about it. The management had no intention of compromising with the union on the discharge cases which finally

Room in Jammer Building at 47 Baltimore Street Is Secured

Republican county headquarters will be opened Monday in the Jammer building at 47 Baltimore street.

This is the location formerly occupied by Lazarus, Inc., woman's apparel concern and it adjoins the Embassy theater.

Announcement to this effect was made last evening by Lewis M. Wilson, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee for Allegany County.

Delay was caused in opening headquarters by unexpected prolongation of negotiations for a central site. It was originally planned to have a location on North Centre street, but changes in certain realty plans made it impossible to bring the refusal for it into effect.

Wilson also announced that a mammoth Willkie banner will be strung across Baltimore street within a few days. The cost of this campaign advertising is being borne by popular subscriptions of $1 each.

Wilson stated that party workers are enthusiastic over the prospects for the Willkie ticket in Cumberland and elsewhere in Allegany county. Many Jeffersonian type Democrats and independents are pledging support.

The county chairman also said that a vigorous campaign would be waged by the committee in the county up until election day.

Orr Countermands Order for Police To Work 12 Hours

Police Commissioner James Orr, yesterday countermanded the order issued by Acting Chief of Police, John J. Trieber, Wednesday placing the Cumberland Police Department on a twelve hour basis.

Orr took action immediately upon his return to the city from an official business trip to Columbus, Ohio. He said there was no trouble in the city and he saw no reason for having the officers to serve four hours more on each shift.

Trieber issued the order following the shutdown of the Celanese plant and it was to become effective yesterday morning at one a. m., but the police commissioner countermanded the order before the officers started on extra duty.

Negotiations over Celanese Plant Dispute Seem To Be at Standstill

While the "battle of statements" continued to rage yesterday on the Celanese front, really nothing of actual importance developed.

All eyes were focused yesterday on Aaron Horvitz, United States conciliator, and John N. Pohlhaus, state labor commissioner, who have become the key figures at the moment by virtue of the fact that they shouldered the responsibility of bringing the participants in the case together.

The conciliators conferred with company officials yesterday morning and worked all day on their diplomatic mission.

However, neither had anything concrete in the way of information to offer last night.

Cumberland citizens, stunned earlier in the week by fast-breaking developments at the plant that culminated in a shutdown Tuesday night had begun to discuss the situation everywhere yesterday in restaurants, office buildings and on downtown city streets.

Many people, who were satisfied that the case had been happily settled to the satisfaction of all concerned, asked the question, "just what is the trouble about?"

The company's stand as evinced by yesterday's statement was simply that the union should sign the new contract, already ratified except for two grievances, and then arbitrate those grievances later.

Those grievances pertain to the discharge of two union employes who were injured in a disorder at the plant last week and the question of discipline.

The union stand has been that corporation has not played square in the matter of discipline and has not given members any guarantee that more unionists won't be suspended or discharged in the future.

Earlier in the week, union officials indicated that the corporation had agreed that there would be no discharge of employes as a result of activity since the expiration of the contract.

Last night, Union President Dundon stated that "we had been assured by the New York officials of the Corporation that the local plant management would be lenient and cooperative in putting the new contract into effect without any hitches."

However, the union contends that since the return from Washington the management has been vague and elusive regarding its intentions.

The company has denied making any agreement in regard to discipline in Washington.

Gateway Chatter

Gateway Chatter urges the citizens of Cumberland to turn out this evening for the "Safety Week" parade which will get under way at 6:30 o'clock.

Safety is naturally something in which all of us should be interested and the Western Maryland Automobile Club deserves a pat on the back for sponsoring "Safety Week" here.

An organization which should come in for a great deal of praise in connection with safety is the "Schoolboy Patrolmen." These youngsters, during the school term, are on the job before and after school to look after the safety of their fellow students.

Members of the patrol have flags stretched to long poles which they place across street intersections to stop traffic while school children cross in safety. Motorists should obey the signals of the patrolmen and be considerate of their work.

Remember it is better ta be late than sorry. Take time to protect yourself and others! Drive CAREFULLY.

— o —

How many Cumberlanders remember, way back in 1915-to 1924 how all of the kids in the neighborhood belonged to the "Lone Scouts?"

It was an organization founded by W. D. Boyce, a Chicago publisher, to give the country boy, or the kid in the smaller towns, the advantage of Scouting that would otherwise be denied them.

At the time referred to there were Lone Scout Tribes most everywhere, and through the medium of their official paper, "Lone Scout," the boys became acquainted with each other, and often made fast friends with members in other cities and states.

In 1924, for various reasons, the Lone Scout organization was absorbed by the Boy Scouts of America, and became the Rural Scout division of the Scouts. However, there was a group of Lone Scouts throughout the country who had learned to love the old organization and what it stood for entirely too well to stand idly by, and see it disappear.

In order to perpetuate it, they banded together into what is known as the EBEETIAN LEGION, and since 1927, this group of old friends has held high the banner of the Lone Indian.

This group has a large well illustrated monthly magazine, which is mailed monthly, no charge to each member. It is edited entirely by the members themselves, eleven months of the year The twelfth issue is edited by their wives and sweethearts, and is called the "Ladies' Number."

There are no dues, no officers and no laws in the Legion. Once a year, over the Labor day week-end, the members have a get-together or convention. The last affair was held in New York city, and at that time it was decided that the 1941 convention should be held in Hagerstown, Md. and is to be designated, "The Family Convention, Down in Dixie."

To become a member of this legion, it is only necessary to have been a member of the Lone Scouts in the "Good Old Days."

Two Damage Suits Docketed in Court Result of Crash

Claims Are Result of Accident on Route 40 in August; $3,500 Asked

Two damage suits asking a total of $3,500 were filed in circuit court yesterday by John A. and Elsie Seippel against G. H. Compton, of LaVale.

According to the petition docketed by Attorney Raymond Lewis Baender, of Baltimore, Compton was responsible for an accident on Route 40 near Mayfield last August in which Mr. and Mrs. Seippel were both injured and their car damaged.

The petition states that the car driven by Seippel was proceeding in an easterly direction on Route 40 when it encountered the truck and trailer being operated by the defendant in a westerly direction.

The collision was due to the fact that the truck and trailer were on the wrong side of the highway, the petition claims, adding that the cause of the crash was due to the "negligence, carelessness and recklessness" of the defendant.

Mrs. Seippel, claiming $2,500 damages, claims she received face, arm, leg and body injuries and that her nervous system sustained a severe shock.

Seippel, who claims he had been operating his car in a careful and prudent manner, claims damages to his car amounted to $145.13 and that he received injuries on his body and limbs. He asks $1,000.

R. E. Atkinson Is Hurt in Accident

Suffers Lacerations and Bruises in Crash on Baltimore Avenue

Richard E. Atkinson, 20, of RFD 3 Cumberland, a Celanese employee, was injured last night on Baltimore avenue in an accident involving a motorcycle and two automobiles.

The motorcycle operated by Atkinson, traveling east, sideswiped the Cumberland-bound car of William Filsinger, of Eckhart, and then crashed against the rear of the parked machine of Fred R. Miller, 324 Baltimore avenue, according to police.

Atkinson suffered lacerations about the face, left arm and knee and bruises. He was taken to Allegany hospital by Thomas K. Dawson, 412 Goethe street, and admitted for observation.

Hospital attendants said he told them he lost control of the motorcycle when the front tire blew out. His condition was reported "good" late last night.

Officers Carl J. Stouffer and Walter P. Crabtree, who investigated, placed a charge of careless driving against Atkinson. No one else was injured in the mishap.

Winning Schoolboy Float Will Be In Parade Tonight

Everything is in readiness for the "Safety Week" parade which will be staged over downtown streets starting at 6:30 o'clock this evening.

The parade and a program at the State armory later are being sponsored by the Western Maryland Auto Club.

It was announced yesterday that student patrolmen of SS. Peter and Paul parochial school will have the float in the parade with which they won a prize in the national convention of schoolboy patrolmen at Washington, D. C., last year.

Demonstrations in practical methods of achieving safety will be put on by city police and members of the fire department at the program in the armory.

Business Group Gives Attention To War Plants

Traffic Congestion Problem and Other Subjects Are Discussed

Local war plants, traffic congestion relief, a community Hallowe'en celebration and development of a convention bureau were among numerous subjects discussed last night at the monthly meeting of the chamber of commerce directors.

Considerable material has been collected by chamber executives describing the vacant plants in Cumberland that might be utilized by the federal government for defense purposes. This is being filed with the quartermaster's division of the United States Army.

In connection therewith, the chamber has arranged to send representatives to a meeting on the subject to be held October 11 at Pittsburgh under auspices of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, of which the local chamber is an affiliate. Availability of plant sites and other plans concerning the development of war industries will be discussed at that time.

Two Traffic Relief Plans

Approval was given a survey in progress by the Traffic committee of the chamber looking to relief of the traffic congestion in the business center of the city.

One plan being worked on is a rerouting of traffic from eastward to westward through Pershing street. Another is the possibility of connecting Canal street with Wineow street as a means of routing traffic through the city from South Cumberland.

Two meetings have already been held with interested groups on the establishment of a convention bureau. John D. Liebau, president, has been asked to appoint a special committee to look into this further.

Meet This Evening

A special committee of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, representatives of the Mercantile Bureau of the chamber and a committee of the Junior Chamber of Commerce will meet at 8:30 o'clock this evening in the senior chamber headquarters to discuss plans for a community Hallowe'en celebration.

This would be held under the sponsorship of the Veterans of Foreign Wars with a big parade and a number of musical, costume and other contests for which cash prizes would be awarded. The idea is to attract groups from a wide area as contestants and to bring people here to witness the event.

Supervision Desired

Those back of this plan feel that a community celebration under proper supervision would not only be of interest to the people generally but would also serve to eliminate hoodlumism throughout the city on the occasion of this annual observance.

The directors authorized the attendance of the secretary at the annual meeting of the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries to be held October 20-23 at Boston.

Louis A. Falardeau, of the Maryland hotel, was elected to chamber membership upon recommendation of the Membership committee

Eisenberg Estate Trustees File Case in Circuit Court

Carrie, Lorraine and Harold E Eisenberg, trustees of the estate of Samuel Eisenberg, yesterday filed suit against Lawrence Peskin, trading as the Family Shoe Store.

According to the suit docketed by Attorney Edward J. Ryan the defendant promised to pay to the plaintiffs the sum of $400 as rent for the premises at 133 Baltimore street for the month of September and has neglected to do so.

Other considerations are enumerated in the petition.

Truck Drivers of Three Cumberland Companies Are Now Out on Strike

Truck drivers and helpers for three Cumberland companies were called out on strike yesterday morning by Local 453, of the Teamsters and Chauffeur's Union, an A. F. of L. affiliate.

C. E. Stutzman, union business agent, said a total of fifteen men stopped working at the Lear and Oliver Ice Cream Company, the the Appel Transfer.

The union agent declared contracts with Bennett and Appel expired August 31 and were extended for an indefinite period in the hope an agreement could be reached. The union has had no contract with Lear and Oliver but has been negotiating for sometime.

The main issue concerning Bennett and Appel, according to the union, is the refusal of the concerns to guarantee four hours work to a man or pay him for four hours when he is called out. The wage scale does not enter into the dispute. Stutzman declared the ice cream company has refused to sign a standard contract.

The Appel Transfer and Bennett Transfer stopped operations yesterday, Stutzman said.

The agent said the union allowed the Bennett firm to handle and ship all perishable goods, mostly meat, after the strike was called. Failure of the company to ship this perishable produce would have resulted in a severe loss, the agent declared.

However, the Lear and Oliver concern continued to operate yesterday, Stutzman said.

The union agents said the membership had not decided as yet whether it would apply for picket permits. The matter is now being considered, he said.

A spokesman for Lear and Oliver said trucks are operating but that a few men did not come to work. The Appel informant declared no trucks are operating and that it is "impossible to live up to the contract asked by the union."

Cannot Compete

Frank Bennett, temporary general manager of the Bennett company, said that his concern lived up to the old contract as much as possible but that the company cannot sign the contract demanded and compete with non-union truckers. He said the proposed contract contains new clauses although the union when presenting it, said it was the same as the old one.

Bennett said he offered to sign a 30 or 60-day contract in an effort to keep things moving. He said the union wants to limit the work week to 48 hours but that in rush periods longer hours must be worked at regular rates to meet competition. Bennett declared some competitors work men much longer periods for only $25 and $30 a week.

He also said the dispute is not over wages and that perishable goods are being moved

Omitted Line Causes Premature Deaths

Through the omission of a line of copy, an article in the NEWS of yesterday unintentionally proclaimed the death of two prominent members of the local lodge of Elks, who say they are very much alive.

Correctly, a paragraph should have appeared as follows:

"Seventy-five members of the Cumberland lodge attended impressive Lodge of Sorrow exercises last (Tuesday) evening at the Elks' home, at which time eulogies on three departed members of the lodge, namely, J. B. Tardy Jenkins, Charles C. Wilson and George Hast, were delivered by Frank Lee Carl, James E. Yarnall and Charles M. Stump."

The NEWS regrets the error.

Lions Club Has Zone Meeting And Induction

Cumberland Adds Six New Members---Uniform Is Adopted in District

Six new members were inducted into the Cumberland Lions club at the Zone meeting and stag seafood dinner of Lions clubs last evening at the Ali Ghan Shrine club.

The new members of the club who are permitted to "change their diet from milk to meat and roar" are W. W. Mortzfeldt, William H. Keight, Edward Nevy, W. Lester Heinrich, W. E. German and William H. Blake. Paul E. Myers, membership chairman, introduced the newcomers to the club and Thomas Lohr Richards had charge of the induction ceremony in which the "Code of Ethics" of the Lions was read.

New Uniform Introduced

Attired in the uniform adopted by District 22, Hugh Keiser, of Washington, D. C., district governor of the Lions, gave a brief talk on the organization which he heads and stated that there are now 1,200 Lions in the district. He named John Park, of the Cumberland club, as uniform chairman, and said he hoped members of Lions clubs in this section would adopt the colorful uniform which he was sporting.

The complete uniform consists of blue coat, red sash, blue tie, tie band, Uncle Sam hat, Lion sleeve insignia and two District 22 lapel pins. An oversea cap may be substituted for an Uncle Sam hat.

The entertainment comprised tap dancing by James "Rochester" Meade, midget colored lad, and baritone horn selections by Joseph Trenton. Meade was accompanied at the piano by Caleb O'Connor, who served as first president of the Washington Lions club nineteen years ago, and Perry Rosenmerkle accompanied Trenton.

It was announced that the Lonaconing Lions club will hold its Charter Night celebration November 18.

Group Singing Features

Group singing was an added feature and among the songs that were sung were "Long, Long Trail, When You Wore a Tulip, Moonlight and Roses, Bells of St. Mary's" and as a grand finale "God Bless America."

Fifty-eight persons attended the stag affair.

Those present were:

Hugh Keiser, Washington, D. C., district governor of District 22-A.

Caleb O'Connor, Georgetown Lions club.

Corporation Calls Upon Union To Sign Contract, Arbitrate Grievances

The gates of the Celanese plant are open and employees who report for work on their regular shifts are being given employment, the management announced last night.

"Employees who are absenting themselves are doing so on their own decision, or on the advice of persons other than the management," the company announced.

As usual, following a shutdown, there is much work to be done. It will take at least three weeks to get the plant in full operation even after all departments reopen, it was reported.

Company Makes Reply

The vote by the union membership of Local 1874 not to return to work until the contract is signed brought a prompt reply from the corporation yesterday.

Informed of the union's action, the company promptly called upon Local 1874 to sign the contract as agreed to in Washington and to arbitrate grievances on discipline.

In reply to statements made by Union President James A. Dundon, the company emphatically denied that it had ever agreed to a general revocation of all disciplinary action in Washington. The company added that it has been, and is, willing to arbitrate grievances arising out of discharges or suspensions.

The complete text of the company's statement is as follows:

"The company is informed by this morning's press that the union has voted not to return to work until a satisfactory agreement is signed. The company is, and always has been, willing to sign the agreement which was settled in Washington and which was there approved by company representatives, by the president of TWUA, a vice president of TWUA, the president and secretary-treasurer and negotiating committee of the local union. This contract can be signed and made effective any time the union wants to carry out its part of the Washington agreement.

Offer Repeated

"The company has always been, and is, willing to arbitrate grievances arising out of discharges or suspensions. The offer to arbitrate was made to the union before the sit-down in the cellulose acetate department commenced on Tuesday, September 17th, and has been repeated thereafter.

"The policy of the company with reference to discipline has been clearly stated to the union both in Washington and in Cumberland. The statement that the company agreed to a withdrawal of all discharges or to a general amnesty is untrue. In Washington the company refused to agree to a general revocation of all disciplinary action. Thereafter the union representatives agreed to the contract which is now awaiting signature. In Cumberland in a conference with the personnel superintendent and the plant manager on Friday, September 13th, the union officers, the negotiating committee and a supplemental committee of several union members were again informed that the company would not grant the union's request that all disciplinary action be revoked and that there be no discipline imposed. The plant manager did, however, reduce five cases of discharge to suspensions for periods of 5 to 10 days.

Make Appointment

"Union officials on Tuesday afternoon made an appointment to see the personnel superintendent of the plant, who regularly handles grievances with them and who met them and offered arbitration. In the afternoon and during the early stages of the sit-down in the cellulose acetate department, the union officials did request that the plant manager attend the conference. The plant manager, through the personnel superintendent, demanded to know whether the union authorized the sit-down then in effect. The union officials refused to answer and thereafter refused to join a conference between the personnel superintendent and a committee of union employes from the cellulose acetate department.

"The acts for which discipline has been imposed include acts of violence in the ejection of employes who were properly at their work, assaults on and insubordination to supervisory officials as well as the acts resulting from a mass movement during working hours away from place of work in which the union president acknowledges that groups of workers left their work and marched in a body toward the warp knitting department.

"The union president was absent in Washington at the time and has only hearsay information and for that reason may have omitted to mention some other facts in connection with this rioting which include the fact that the marching body armed itself with sticks and that plant authorities promptly notified union hall, the state police and the sheriff of this county and withdrew the company police from the protection of the warp knitting department as soon as authorities arrived to preserve order.

"Obviously, if the workers had remained at their places of work they would not have come in contact with the police who were at a building approximately one-half mile from the place of work of most of the men.

"So far as the facts are in dispute and so far as the propriety of imposing discipline may be disputed,
